Processor Architecture Jurij Silc, Borut Robic, Theo Ungerer, 2012-12-06 Today's microprocessors are the powerful descendants of the von Neumann 1 computer dating back to a memo of Burks Goldstine and von Neumann of 1946 The so called von Neumann architecture is characterized by a sequential control flow resulting in a sequential instruction stream A program counter addresses the next instruction if the preceding instruction is not a control instruction such as e.g. jump branch subprogram call or return An instruction is coded in an instruction format of fixed or variable length where the opcode is followed by one or more operands that can be data addresses of data or the address of an instruction in the case of a control instruction The opcode defines the types of operands Code and data are stored in a common storage that is linear addressed in units of memory words bytes words etc The overwhelming design criterion of the von Neumann computer was the minimization of hardware and especially of storage The most simple implementation of a von Neumann computer is characterized by a microarchitecture that defines a closely coupled control and arithmetic logic unit ALU a storage unit and an I/O unit all connected by a single connection unit The instruction fetch by the control unit alternates with operand fetches and result stores for the ALU

Visualization in Scientific Computing Michel Grave, Yvon Le Lous, W. Terry Hewitt, 2012-12-06 Visualization in scientific computing is getting more and more attention from many people Especially in relation with the fast increase of computing power graphic tools are required in many cases for interpreting and presenting the results of various simulations or for analyzing physical phenomena The Eurographics Working Group on Visualization in Scientific Computing has therefore organized a first workshop at Electricite de France Clamart in cooperation with ONERA Chatillon A wide range of papers were selected in order to cover most of the topics of interest for the members of the group for this first edition and 26 of them were presented in two days Subsequently 18 papers were selected for this volume 1 the presentations were organized in eight small sessions in addition to discussions in small subgroups The first two sessions were dedicated to the specific needs for visualization in computational sciences the need for graphics support in large computing centres and high performance networks needs of research and education in universities and academic centres and the need for effective and efficient ways of integrating numerical computations or experimental data and graphics Three of those papers are in Part I of this book The third session discussed the importance and difficulties of using standards in visualization software and was related to the fourth session where some reference models and distributed graphics systems were discussed Part II has five papers from these sessions
