

Skin Turgor Test

Patient name: Rebecca Harris

Age: 67

Gender: Female

Date: September 20, 2024

Examiner: Emily Thompson

Test procedure

1. Select a site for the test. Common areas for testing include the lower arm or abdomen.
2. Grasp a small section of skin between two fingers and pull it upwards to create a "tent."
3. After a few seconds, release the skin and observe how quickly it returns to its original position.

Results and interpretation

- ☐ Normal response: The skin should return immediately or within a second.
- ☒ Poor response: If the skin remains tented or takes several seconds to return, this may indicate dehydration.

Additional notes

The patient's skin turgor test showed delayed return of skin, indicating potential dehydration. Hydration intervention is recommended, and the patient has been advised to increase fluid intake immediately. Follow-up to monitor hydration status will be scheduled for tomorrow.
