

Difficult Human Relationships in The Kite Runner

10 pages | 2328 words

1. Friendship, guilt, redemption "He knew about Assef, the kite, the money, the watch with the lightning bolt hands. He had always known. 'Come. There is a way to be good again,' Rahim Khan had said on the phone just before hanging up. Said it in passing, almost as an afterthought. " (Chapter 14, pg 202). This quote symbolizes how Amir strived to do everything to forget, all he needed to do was to fly to Pakistan and see what Rahim Khan wanted him to do. So that's exactly what Amir did. Rahim Khan tells Amir that "there is a way to be good again". Amir knew straightaway what he was talking about.

He realizes, that all of those years, Rahim Khan had known about Assef, the kite, the money, the watch with the lightning bolt hands. He had always known. Rahim Khan had knew about Hassan getting raped. He needs to go to Afghanistan and talk about the 'unspoken secret' they both knew about. After the phone conversation, Amir keeps remembering Hassan saying 'for you, a thousand times over! ' Thinking of this, he knows he has to go to Afghanistan, see Rahim Khan, uncover the secrets and do whatever he asks to 'be good again'. By this he means that Amir has the opportunity to make up for his betrayal of Hassan by saving his son, Sohrab.

Rahim Khan knows what really happened to Hassan and also knows that this has been bothering Amir for years so he is basically implying that Amir can still redeem himself if he goes back to Afghanistan. When Amir ran, he ran from jealousy and fear; fear of Assef and fear of his own reputation as a Pashtun standing up for a Hazara. The negativity of the social setting influenced Amir's rash decision on betraying Hassan. The prevailing theme of guilt and redemption is weaved through the journey of Amir's life, influenced by the society, where Hazaras are betrayed. 2.

Parental relationships "Here is another cliché my creative writing teacher would have scoffed at: like father like son. But, it was true, wasn't it? As it turned out, Baba and I were more alike than I'd ever known. We had both betrayed the people who would have given their lives for us. And with that came this realization: that Rahim Khan had summoned me there to atone not just for my sins but for Baba's too. " (Chapter 18, pg 238) I chose this quote because not only is it ironic in and of itself, but it also ironically characterizes all the characters in the novel.

Amir felt his "sin"—betraying Hassan—made him so different from his father. He has spent much of his life trying to please Baba and mimic his father's life. It is ironic that now, all these years later, when he discovers he and his father were so similar, it sickens him rather than bringing him joy. In the novel, he continually states that he would've never would have dreamed that Baba's greatest sin would be theft on so...

A Study Guide for Khaled Hosseini's The Kite Runner Gale, Cengage Learning, 2015-03-13 A Study Guide for Khaled Hosseini's The Kite Runner excerpted from Gale's acclaimed Literary News For Students. This concise study guide includes plot summary, character analysis, author biography, study questions, historical context, suggestions for further reading, and much more. For any literature project, trust Literary News For Students for all of your research needs. Culture, Diaspora, and Modernity in Muslim Writing Rehana Ahmed, Peter Morey, Amina Yaqin, 2012-08-21 Fiction by writers of Muslim background forms one of the most diverse, vibrant, and high-profile corpora of work being produced today, from the trail-blazing writing of Salman Rushdie and Hanif Kureishi, which challenged political and racial orthodoxies in the 1980s, to that of a new generation including Mohsin Hamid, Nadeem Aslam, and Kamila Shamsie. This collection reflects the variety of those fictions. Experts in English, South Asian, and postcolonial literatures address the nature of Muslim identity, its response to political realignments since the 1980s, its tensions between religious and secular models of citizenship, and its manifestation of these tensions as conflict between generations. In considering the perceptions of Muslims, contributors also explore the roles of immigration, class, gender, and national identity, as well as the impact of 9/11. This volume includes essays on contemporary fiction by writers of Muslim origin and non-Muslims writing about Muslims. It aims to push beyond the habitual populist framing of Muslims as strangers or interlopers whose ways and beliefs are at odds with those of modernity, exposing the hidden, bound conservative assumptions that underpin such perspectives. While returning to themes that are of particular significance to diasporic Muslim cultures, such as secularism, modernity, multiculturalism, and citizenship, the essays reveal that Muslim writing grapples with the same big questions as serve to exercise all writers and intellectuals at the present time: How does one reconcile the impulses of the individual with the requirements of community? How can one belong in the modern world? What is the role of art in making sense of chaotic contemporary experience? Middle Ground Sheryl L. Finkle, Tamara J. Lilly, 2008 Reviews principles of cross-cultural pedagogy and offers both novice and experienced grade 6-12 teachers multiple activities for studying selected texts from and about the Middle East. For years, literature from and about the Middle East has largely been missing from middle and high school curricula. Changing demographics and global citizenship necessitate a better understanding of Middle Eastern history, culture, and literature. Recognizing this need, veteran teachers Sheryl L. Finkle and Tamara J. Lilly offer a comprehensive review of the theory and practice of teaching Middle Eastern literature. In this book, they review principles of multicultural, cross-cultural pedagogy, describe principles for selecting quality texts, and explain the importance of teaching both contemporary and ancient literature of the region. They illustrate how using these texts can engage young readers and help develop their language and literacy skills, and provide activities, lessons, and materials for various print and nonprint texts, including books such as Habibi, The Kite Runner, and Behind the Burqa: Our Life in Afghanistan and How We Escaped to Freedom, and the films Osama and Reel Bad Arabs.

Studying literature from and about the Middle East not only enables students to gain a deeper understanding of the world around them but also allows them to develop crucial critical thinking and literacy skills that can be applied outside the English classroom

Indian English and the Fiction of National Literature Rosemary Marangoly George, 2013-11-21. During the twentieth century at the height of the independence movement and after Indian literary writing in English was entrusted with the task of consolidating the image of a unified seemingly caste free modernising India for consumption both at home and abroad. This led to a critical insistence on the proximity of the national and the literary which in turn led to the canonisation of certain writers and themes and the dismissal of others. Examining English anthologies of Indian literature as well as the establishment of the Sahitya Akademi the national academy of letters and the work of R K Narayan and Mulk Raj Anand among others, Rosemary Marangoly George exposes the painstaking efforts that went into the elaboration of a national literature in English for independent India even while deliberating the fundamental limitations of using a nation centric critical framework for reading literary works.

Translating Dissent Mona Baker, 2015-10-30. Written by the winners of the Intranews Linguists of the Year award for 2016. Discursive and non discursive interventions in the political arena are heavily mediated by various acts of translation that enable protest movements to connect across the globe. Focusing on the Egyptian experience since 2011, this volume brings together a unique group of activists who are able to reflect on the complexities, challenges and limitations of one or more forms of translation and its impact on their ability to interact with a variety of domestic and global audiences. Drawing on a wide range of genres and modalities from documentary film and subtitling to oral narratives webcomics and street art the 18 essays reveal the dynamics and complexities of translation in protest movements across the world Each unique contribution demonstrates some aspect of the interdependence of these movements and their inevitable reliance on translation to create networks of solidarity The volume is framed by a substantial introduction by Mona Baker and includes an interview with Egyptian activist and film maker Philip Rizk With contributions by scholars and artists professionals and activists directly involved in the Egyptian revolution and other movements Translating Dissent will be of interest to students of translation intercultural studies and sociology as well as the reader interested in the study of social and political movements Online materials including links to relevant websites and videos are available at <http://www.routledge.com/cw/baker> Additional resources for Translation and Interpreting Studies are available on the Routledge Translation Studies Portal <http://www.routledge.com/textbooks/translationstudies>
