

Unit 2 Reading Section 2 Pure Competition

Conditions for Pure Competition:

The simplest market structure is pure competition. In such markets, there are so many producers that each producer has almost the same price. Producers sell their products as well part of the total supply, so that each individual producer has no effect on the price. In addition, each producer is a price taker and must accept the market price. There is no way for any one producer to influence the price. There are four conditions for pure competition. First, it must have many producers selling identical products. Second, there must be many buyers. Producers sell to the general public, not to a few large buyers. Third, called atomistic, each buyer purchases only a small portion of the total supply. Lastly, entry and exit must be easy. There must be no barriers to entry. A few examples exist of pure competition. Examples include markets for wheat, soybeans, and the market for foreign exchange (the Dollar Exchange).
