

ALL MODE COMMUNICATIONS RECEIVER FRG-7700

GENERAL DESCRIPTION

The FRG-7700 is a revolutionary communications receiver for the most demanding shortwave listener. Using an advanced frequency synthesizer, the FRG-7700 provides reception over the range 150 kHz – 29.9 MHz, with provision for reception of AM, SSB, CW, and FM stations. In the AM mode, three bandwidths are available, allowing the operator to select the IF bandwidth most appropriate for the interference level and fidelity requirements of each listening period.

Available as an option for the FRG-7700 is Yaesu's exciting memory feature, which allows the storage and recall of up to twelve discrete frequencies. This allows the operator to watch several stations with pushbutton ease, thus eliminating the considerable effort involved in tuning manually for each of several stations one wants to watch. A memory backup feature is built into the memory unit (three penlight cells required, batteries not supplied).

The FRG-7700 features high sensitivity, excellent selectivity, digital plus analog display of the operating frequency, and a built-in digital quartz clock that can be programmed to turn the receiver on and off. A snooze timer is included in the clock feature. The timer may also be used to control peripheral equipment such as a tape recorder, for unattended recording of programs you might otherwise miss because you must be away from your station.

Top performance features include a highly sensitive AGC (Automatic Gain Control) system.
