

PROTECT THE OUTDOORS

As a Scout, you will spend much of your time in the open. All of America will lie before you—her forests and fields, her mountains and valleys, her rivers and lakes—yours to enjoy and use wisely.

Tell why natural resources are important to you and to the future of our country.

Our Natural Resources. The natural resources of a country include its soil and waters, its plants and animals, its minerals. In this respect, America is one of the richest countries in the world.

Our soil gives us food in abundance—bumper crops of corn and wheat and vegetables. Our grasslands teem with cattle that provide us with milk and meat and leather. Our forests give us products that range from the wood we use for building our homes to the maple syrup you pour on your pancakes—but are important also for being a source of pleasure to you and other hikers and campers, for giving food and shelter to wildlife, for regulating the flow of streams and cutting down flood dangers. As far as minerals are concerned, few countries can match the variety and wealth of America in metal ores and coal, oil and natural gas, and many other things.

But soil can be lost if it is not properly cared for, water can be polluted, grasslands and forests and wildlife can be destroyed by fire, minerals can be wasted.

It is up to you to help conserve our natural resources—for your own sake and for the sake of every other American citizen.
