A comparative analysis of Tamale, Ouagadougou, Bamenda and Bamako Christina Seeger ,2021-11-08 Smallholder farmers cultivating in West African cities often lack access to irrigation water and may use wastewater to irrigate their fields particularly in the dry season Wastewater contaminates vegetables with pathogens so that local consumers are likely to be exposed to health risks Market data on consumers actual payments for safety improved pathogen reduced vegetables are not available in West Africa as vegetables differing in safety levels are sold due to an information deficit on the consumers side at a uniform market price Certification and repeated purchase experience may reduce these information deficits For both market signals to be effective trust is required This book analyses the role of trust in explaining consumers maximum willingness to pay WTP for safe and certified safe food in a Hicksian framework This theory is tested using household data n 2 662 generated from contingent valuation surveys undertaken in Tamale Ouagadougou Bamenda and Bamako The findings show that local consumers are willing to pay substantially higher prices 40 % to 160 % for certified safe vegetables They further suggest that trust in farmers and traders reduces WTP and trust in certifying institutions increases WTP for certified safe vegetables Most WTPs were found to be construct valid They are therefore taken as trustworthy expressions of consumers preferences for safety improved vegetables

These results stress the need to introduce vegetable certification in West African cities

Governance of Hospitals in Central and Eastern Europe Przemyslaw Marcin Sowa, 2015-10-28. This book presents a novel view of healthcare system transition in post-communist countries. It is the first region-wide comparative study of hospital governance in Eastern Europe. Comprehensive new material shows the evolution and significance of governance complementing recent publications on the topic from industrialised countries. Throughout the book, governance is described and substantiated as a major component that together with provider payment mechanisms defines the hospital sector's operations. This view subscribes to the economists' growing appreciation of extra-financial aspects in the discussion of incentives and regulation of healthcare markets. In particular, the book explains how governance arrangements may affect the outcomes of healthcare financing reforms and should thus be seen as a critical determinant of their success or failure. This new model of thinking about healthcare system transition emerges from an analysis of 22 countries over the course of two decades. While the primary focus of the study is on developing the hospital sector, an extensive background chapter provides a standalone introduction to the dynamically changing landscape of healthcare in Eastern Europe and an overview of the various problems and challenges the region is facing. Practitioners, policy makers, academics and students interested in Eastern European healthcare systems, their origins, current status and ways forward, will appreciate the book's reflections on the problem complexity, the clarity of its concepts and its accessible style of presentation.

Mills, Nicola Barban, Felix C.

Tropf, 2020-02-18 A comprehensive introduction to modern applied statistical genetic data analysis accessible to those without a background in molecular biology or genetics. Human genetic research is now relevant beyond biology, epidemiology and the medical sciences with applications in such fields as psychology, psychiatry, statistics, demography, sociology and economics. With advances in computing power, the availability of data and new techniques, it is now possible to integrate large scale molecular genetic information into research across a broad range of topics. This book offers the first comprehensive introduction to modern applied statistical genetic data analysis that covers theory, data preparation and analysis of molecular genetic data with hands on computer exercises. It is accessible to students and researchers in any empirically oriented medical, biological or social science discipline; a background in molecular biology or genetics is not required. The book first provides foundations for statistical genetic data analysis including a survey of fundamental concepts, primers on statistics and human evolution and an introduction to polygenic scores. It then covers the practicalities of working with genetic data, discussing such topics as analytical challenges and data management. Finally, the book presents applications and advanced topics including polygenic score and gene-environment interaction applications, Mendelian Randomization and instrumental variables and ethical issues. The software and data used in the book are freely available and can be found on the book's website. Data Envelopment Analysis Joe Zhu, 2015-03-18 This handbook represents a milestone in the progression of Data Envelopment Analysis (DEA). The Paradox of Points Sören Köcher, 2015-04-14 In his research Sören Köcher provides valuable insights on the paradoxical effects of the magnitude of a loyalty program, i.e. the sheer number of points, miles or stamps credited for every purchase and required for reward redemption on the central consumer decisions in loyalty program memberships. In sum the results of twelve empirical studies reveal that high magnitude currencies improve the attractiveness of medium collection but entail reluctant medium spending behavior These findings provide important implications for a more efficient usage of loyalty programs in business practices In addition this dissertation discovers a violation of one of the most fundamental assumptions of rational choice theory and thus contributes to a better understanding of when and why people deviate from rational decision making
