as well as different fractions of capital and uneven and combined development The author analyses the neoliberal transformation of the Hungarian political economy and argues that the drift to authoritarianism under the Orb n regime cannot be explained as a case of Hungarian exceptionalism but rather represents an outcome of the inherent contradictions of the variety of neoliberalism that emerged in Hungary after 1989

Prime Ministers in Central and Eastern Europe Florian Grotz, Jan Berz, Corinna Kroeber, Marko Kušec, 2025-01-12 Prime Ministers PMs are the most influential powerful and visible politicians in parliamentary democracies Their prominent role has been increasing in Western democracies due to the presidentialization of politics But is this also true for new democracies such as those in post communist Central and Eastern Europe CEE As politics in CEE has been characterized by high personalization weak voter party linkages and strong media influence of political leaders prime ministerial performance may be even more important for the functioning of parliamentary democracy in those countries At the same time conventional wisdom suggests that prime ministers in CEE perform weakly because they lack political experience and operate in an extraordinarily difficult context but this assumption has not been systematically examined To close this research gap this book presents a new conceptual approach to measuring prime ministerial performance and offers a novel dataset of 131 cabinets in eleven CEE countries between 1990 and 2018 The comparative analyses of this data reveal that the political experience of post communist prime ministers varies considerably they range from politically inexperienced outsiders to insiders with long standing careers in parliament government and party leadership At the same time multivariate analyses of the quantitative data and qualitative cases demonstrate that variations in the careers contexts and performance of prime ministers are systematically connected In this way the book not only qualifies conventional assumptions about prime ministers in CEE but also substantiates the theoretical relationship between their careers contexts and performance Prime Ministers in Central and Eastern Europe thus contributes to an enhanced understanding of the functioning of post communist democracies and provides new insights for scholarly work engaging with political leadership Comparative Politics is a series for researchers teachers and students of political science that deals with contemporary government and politics Global in scope books in the series are characterized by a stress on comparative analysis and strong methodological rigour The series is published in association with the European Consortium for Political Research For more information visit www.ecprnet.eu The series is edited by Nicole Bolleyer Chair of Comparative Political Science Geschwister Scholl Institut LMU Munich and Jonathan Slapin Professor of Political Institutions and European Politics Department of Political Science University of Zurich aiming to situate the development of the European Union in a broader context of pan European and global processes Europe has been cut down to size but it does not have to become a global backwater and the study of contemporary Europe's institutional reality does not have to be boring The book counters this misperception conveying the essential facts and theories of contemporary European reality in a clear and approachable analysis It will serve as a readable introduction both to the academic field of European studies and to contemporary Europe itself (Post)Socialist Transformation of main financial products for private finance is provided as well as an explanation of how public funds can act as leverage to catalyze private resources through the use of guarantee funds In The Economics of the Audiovisual Industry the author suggests that rather than relying on subsidized public support the audiovisual industry should foster private public partnerships and market dynamics to promote an alternative funding model based on a profitable and long lasting connection between the audiovisual and financial markets The valuation model both for products and firms proposed in this book are at the basis of this new approach
