

P

PROTECTION

Protect the injury and prevent further damage by using a brace or splint to support the injured joint; this may allow for an earlier return to function.

R

REST

Resist the urge to work through the injury, which could cause further damage; instead, rest the affected joint, and allow the injury to heal. The duration and type of rest will depend on the tissue damaged and the severity of the injury.

I

ICE

Apply cold therapy by using a commercial cold pack or a bag of ice – even a package of frozen food will do. As soon as possible after the injury, attempt to ice the area for 15 to 20 minutes; repeat the cold therapy four to eight times a day for the first 48 hours or until swelling improves. Be careful not to apply ice directly to the skin or use it too long.

C

COMPRESSION

Compression can help minimize swelling and provides mild support. Apply an elastic bandage to the injured joint, beginning a few inches below the injury, overlapping each layer as you work your way up to a few inches above the injured area. Be careful not to wrap the bandage too tightly.

E

ELEVATION

Elevating the injured limb helps to drain fluid away from the site, which helps to decrease swelling and may decrease pain.

Price, Principle, and the Environment Mark Sagoff, 2004-09-06 Mark Sagoff has written an engaging and provocative book about the contribution economics can make to environmental policy Sagoff argues that economics can be helpful in designing institutions and processes through which people can settle environmental disputes However he contends that economic analysis fails completely when it attempts to attach value to environmental goods It fails because preference satisfaction has no relation to any good Economic valuation lacks data because preferences cannot be observed Willingness to pay is benchmarked on market price and thus may reflect producer cost not consumer benefit Moreover economists cannot second guess market outcomes because they have no better information than market participants Mark Sagoff's conclusion is that environmental policy turns on principles that are best identified and applied through political processes Written with verve and fluency this book will be eagerly sought out by students and professionals in environmental policy as well as informed general readers

Regional Price Formation in Eastern Europe J.M. van Brabant, 2012-12-06 This monograph presents a detailed examination of a variety of issues pertaining to pricing in the context of the Council for Mutual Economic Assistance CMEA a designation that I much prefer over Comecon It situates itself within the contours of the pricing problematique that I have recently analyzed as one component of the broader aspects of monetary cooperation essentially among the Eastern European countries see Chapters 4 and 5 of Brabant 1987 The suggestion that I elaborate in detail on the circumstances under which prices for regional trade within the framework of the CMEA are determined was strongly urged by an anonymous referee of Brabant 1986b and Josef Brada the editor of Journal of Comparative Economics Both evidently felt that the comparatively commodity specific pricing issues that I have presented piecemeal in half a dozen articles or so since 1984 had remained too narrow largely configured as they inevitably were by the empirical findings of exercises applied to a small number of commodities as discussed here in Chapter 7 Under the circumstances I saw little point in attempting to set forth these intricate issues in a comprehensive framework Perhaps the central motivation was that many of the regional pricing issues in the CMEA have by and large remained quite obscure and intractable They might be crucial determinants in some isolated cases as I was trying to verify
