Inhibitory Control and Drug Abuse Prevention Michael T. Bardo, Diana H. Fishbein, Richard Milich, 2011-03-30 The purpose of this book is to review our state of knowledge about the neurobehavioral and psychosocial processes involved in behavioral inhibitory processes and to provide an insight into how these basic research findings may be translated into the practice of drug abuse prevention interventions Over the last decade there has been a wealth of information indicating that substance use disorders do not simply reflect an exaggeration of reward seeking behavior but that they also represent a dysfunction of behavioral inhibitory processes that are critical in exercising self control A number of studies have determined that individuals with substance use disorders have poor inhibitory control compared to non abusing individuals In addition the fact that the adolescent period is often characterized by a lack of inhibitory control may be one important reason for the heightened vulnerability for the initiation of drug use during this time Controlled experiments utilizing neuroscience techniques in laboratory animals or neuroimaging techniques in humans have revealed that individual differences in prefrontal cortical regions may underlie at least in part these differences in inhibitory control Although a few excellent journal reviews have been published on the role of inhibitory deficits in drug abuse there has been relatively little attention paid to the potential applications of this work for drug abuse prevention The current book will provide both basic and applied researchers with an overview of this important health relevant topic Since translational research cuts across multiple disciplines and most readers are not familiar with all of these disciplines the reading level will be geared to be accessible to graduate students as well as to faculty and researchers in the field The book will be organized around three general themes encased within introductory and concluding chapters The first theme will review basic neurobehavioral research findings on inhibition and drug abuse Chapters in this theme will emphasize laboratory studies using human volunteers or laboratory animals that document the latest research implicating a relation between inhibition and drug abuse at both the neural and behavioral levels of analysis The second theme will move the topic to at risk populations that have impulse control problems including children adolescents and young adults The third theme will concentrate on prevention science as it relates to inhibitory control Chapters in this theme will be written by experts attempting to develop and improve prevention interventions by integrating evidence based knowledge about inhibitory control processes In all of the chapters writers will be asked to speculate about innovative approaches that may be useful for the practice of prevention
