Yakovlev,Aleksandr V. Zorin,2013-11-11 This research monograph demonstrates the possible ways of using stochastic simulation for exploring cell kinetics emphasising the effects of cell radiobiology In vitro kinetics of normal and irradiated cells is the main subject but some approaches to the simulation of controlled cell systems are considered as well the epithelium of the small intestine in mice taken as a case in point Of particular interest is the evaluation of simulation modelling as a tool for gaining insight into biological processes and hence the new inferences from concrete experimental data concerning regularities in cell population response to irradiation The book is intended to stimulate interest among computer science specialists in developing new more efficient means for the simulation of cell systems and to help radiobiologists in interpreting the experimental data The reader is expected to be acquainted with fundamentals of the theory of probability and stochastic processes Applications are addressed to a biologically educated reader Indian Journal of History of Science ,1978 Report of the 1977 National Survey of Science, Mathematics, and Social Studies Education Iris R. Division of Vocational and Technical Education,1967 Electrical Double Layers in Biology Konrad Bach,2012-12-06 A number of apparently unrelated phenomena in biological systems e g biopolymer aggregation cell cell interactions ion transport across membranes arise from the special properties of charged surfaces A symposium entitled Electrical Double Layers in Biology which took place at the Toronto meeting of the Electrochemical Society 12-17 May 1985 focused on the common features of these phenomena The papers presented at that symposium are collected here and they illustrate ways in which an understanding of electrical double layers can elucidate a problem in Biology An example of this approach can be seen from the paper I presented on ion transport and excitation where the unusual ion flows during nerve excitation are actually expected if one includes the effects of electrical double layers at membrane surfaces Furthermore the selectivity of the ion channels in these membranes can be better understood on this basis Other presentations account for such observations as the changes in spacing between muscle proteins during contraction the interactions of red cells to form rouleaux the electrical properties of algal cell membranes electrokinetic potentials during blood flow in arteries etc I trust that these papers will indicate the value of electrochemistry in the study of biological systems an area of research usually called Bioelectrochemistry and will encourage biologists to use these ideas when approaching related problems
