

Activity 10.1

Reading material on our website on genetic variation in gametes completes part 1 of the following questions. Consider whether your understanding of the concepts discussed in the lecture.

1. Match each of the following changes in chromosome structure to its definition:

☒ A. Crossing

☐ B. Duplication

☐ C. Inversion

☐ D. Translocation

1a. is fusion of 2 chromosomes by their ends

1b. is presence of chromosome in duplicate

1c. is segment of one chromosome transferred to another chromosome; different, same chromosome, chromosome

1d. is fusion of 2 chromosomes (segment from one moves from one to other)

2. How many genetically different gametes can be produced from a diploid cell with 4 pairs of chromosomes (pairs)? Explain your answer.

There are 16 genetically different gametes that can be produced (using the 2ⁿ rule) or 16 total possible combinations of pairs of chromosomes with each chromosome pair having 2 possible alleles or 16 possible combinations

3. Although you will learn in next lecture of health from your parents, you may wonder that some health issues are less frequent in some populations. For example, health issues such as sickle cell anemia may occur more often in some populations. Why?

There have been several hypotheses and studies on the sickle cell anemia. The most common one is that sickle cell anemia is caused by a mutation in the hemoglobin gene, which is inherited from both parents. This is a recessive trait, meaning that you need to inherit the sickle cell allele from both parents to have the disease. However, there are other factors that can influence the frequency of the sickle cell allele in a population, such as natural selection.

4. Describe the alignment of chromosomes during prophase I, write the equations.

During prophase I, the chromosomes condense and the homologous chromosomes align together, called synapsis. This is a key event because it allows the exchange of genetic material and results in the genetic recombination.

5. How does recombination lead to chromosomal polymorphism? Describe how types of genetic disorders that can result from recombination.
