The Mounted Infantry had a short life spanning from the mid 1880s until disbanded in 1913. To continue the camaraderie of the corps past surviving members formed the M I Club and in 1936 decided to publish a short history based on Regimental records and personal reflections. An appeal elicited responses and work was begun by Major Tomlin. The manuscript was almost complete at the start of the Second World War when an enthusiastic cull of papers by Tomlin's family during a wastepaper salvage drive included much of the work he had completed. This would have been the end of the project but Brigadier Standish G Craufurd intervened and undertook to rewrite the work using what material remained and his own resources. When the draft was substantially completed Sir Ian Hamilton then in his 91st year was approached to write the foreword; he responded that he felt this was a makeshift history that would best be left until the end of the war when access to records would be easier and the manuscript could be improved upon. This archive including the unpublished manuscript letters and reminiscences came up for sale on an online auction recently and provides a unique and interesting record of the Mounted Infantry. Considering that history of this corps is sparsely documented it would be a great pity to let slip an account of a side issue of the old Army, a very distinct phase just before the great change brought by the Great War.

With the Mounted Infantry and the Mashona Field Force, 1896 Sir Edwin Alfred Hervey Alderson, 1898 The British Army Regular Mounted Infantry 1880-1913 Andrew Winrow, 2016-11-03

The regular Mounted Infantry was one of the most important innovations of the late Victorian and Edwardian British Army. Rather than fight on horseback in the traditional manner of cavalry, they used horses primarily to move swiftly about the battlefield where they would then dismount and fight on foot, thus anticipating the development of mechanised infantry tactics during the twentieth century. Yet despite this apparent foresight, the mounted infantry concept was abandoned by the British Army in 1913, just at the point when it may have made the transition from a colonial to a continental force as part of the British Expeditionary Force. Exploring the historical background to the Mounted Infantry, this book untangles the debates that raged in the army, Parliament and the press between its advocates and the supporters of the established cavalry. With its origins in the extemporised mounted detachments raised during times of crisis from infantry battalions on overseas imperial garrison duties, Dr Winrow reveals how the Mounted Infantry model, unique among European armies, evolved into a formalised and apparently highly successful organisation of non-cavalry mounted troops. He then analyses why the Mounted Infantry concept fell out of favour just eleven years after its apogee during the South African Anglo-Boer War of 1899-1902. As such, the book will be of interest not only to historians of the nineteenth-century British army but also those tracing the development of modern military doctrine and tactics to which the Mounted Infantry provided

Negotiating Law, Policing and Morality in African Chingozha, Misheck P.,Mawere, Munyaradzi,2015-09-04 The relationship between police and the public in formerly colonised countries of Africa has never been smooth It is plagued with cliches of suspicion mistrust and brutality which are all a result of the legacy of draconian policing in colonial Africa This colonial hangover has chiefly been an upshot of sluggish switching from the mantra of colonial policing to community progressive policing advocated in democratic societies This book the result of five years of ethnographic and library research on the interaction and relationships between police and members of the public in Zimbabwe is a clarion call for a generative progressive working together between the police and the public for a peaceful and orderly society While it traces the historical trends and nature of policing in Africa and in particular Zimbabwe the book demonstrates how law morality and policing enrich one another The book offers critical insights in the interpretation of contemporary policing in Zimbabwe with a view to inform and draw lessons for both police and the public It should be of interest not only to legal anthropologists but also political scientists members of the public police instructors police officers and students and educators in academic disciplines such as criminal justice criminology law sociology African studies and leadership and conflict management
