Abstract—This paper presents the design and implementation of the mobile student handbook for the Department of Computer and Communications Engineering, Abubakar Tafawa Balewa University. The book was aimed at providing students with specific information for the curriculum of the department, that clearly indicates their structures as given by the Minimum Academic Standard of the National Universities Commission (NUC-MAS) Nigeria and it also provides information on the brief history of the department, entry requirement, grading system, graduation requirements among many. The Conventional student handbook is a hard copy that is not easy to carry alone all the time. To address this setback, a software application of a student handbook was developed using Android SDK. This will help to provide an easy to use, interactive and portable means for simple access to the department's curriculum structure subsequently, which will assist students in the process of their academic pursuits. The user evaluation process was employed to validate the application, this involved installations of the application to the mobile phone of 100 students and 20 staff. The results were excellent and response from the users was awesome. Moreover, this is an android offline mobile application that is simple to use and low cost. In the future, the link to the university website should be incorporated for further access to information, the addition of some functions that may allow dynamic modification of the application contents should also be incorporated.

I. INTRODUCTION

The Student handbook is a property of the Department of Computer and Communications Engineering (DCEE) in the Abubakar Tafawa Balewa University, Bauchi. This book was aimed at becoming the companion of every student. Though printed copy requires a lot of planning and time during printing, they can be heavy and hard to carry along. Using this application via a mobile system will replace these issues [1].

Therefore, the department thought that they require easy access or easy maintain handbook, which can serve as the major source of information for the department and can be considered as the companion of all students. Due to the rise in the performance index of Android Operating System, the department realizes, and understands the needs for the conversion of the book into an android application, this app will provide an easy to use, interactive and portable means for easy access to the department's information. This designed application is an invention to the printed traditional system [2].

The student handbook is designed to be a reference material for students in the department. Students can access course content, download some materials for reading ahead of the class on his phone without carrying the heavy printed copy. The mobile student handbook is easy access, easy to carry application on android phones. It is the exact copy of the original hard copy and both the department and students require a means that possess these properties.

This paper describes the development and implementation of a mobile application for student handbook based on the android operating system. It contains concise information of the department, and was also aimed at guiding the students to know their courses at various levels, other relevant information about the department was also added e.g. the facilities that can assist the users to search for various courses and their contents in the department, the list of courses assigned to every level. Students will also have access to the grading system and final year project report format and these are few facilities among many. Finally, the development of this application will solve the issue of the information gap between the users and the DCEE.

The use of the mobile applications is becoming more interesting and mobile devices are continually evolving more in capabilities, specifically with the emergence of integrated phone skills. Phones are now coming with better features and they are no longer considered as just communication devices, but as a means of information sharing, retrieval and source of fun. It was stated by Ron McGivern and William Little in [3] that phone giant Nokia states that; there are 4 billion mobile phone clients worldwide. Today, nearly all people have smartphones and students use them better than they use computers, software application development has now been seen as desirable skill in order technical and non-technical fields. Because of demands in the automated system these days, academia set-up like Universities requested their traditional printed copies to function on the mobile system [4], [5].

For instance, the office of the student affairs of the Ateneo De Naga University (AdNU) designed an application [6], this application has some features like procedures and requirements for their services and programs, it was also aimed at helping students to know some important information like boarding a house and dormitory among many. Mobile-based application of student Handbook of the Northern Negros State College of Science and Technology was designed by [7], the developed mobile-based is the replica of the printed copy of the Handbook. The college sees the need to enhance their information dissemination; this could help in understanding the policies, rules, and regulations of the college. The Information technology students of Manuel S. Enverga University Foundation (MSEUF) has developed its
