

Endocrine system. Endocrine system consists of several glands/glandular cells which bring about the overall common function of chemical coordination in the body. Almost all endocrine glands act in a coordinated manner. They activate each other and work as a system of organs called endocrine system. A system is defined as a group of organs performing an overall common function.

10.2 GENERAL PROPERTIES OF HORMONES

1. Hormones are secreted from their source directly into the blood (and not into lymph).
2. They regulate the physiological processes by chemical means. They affect the enzyme systems of the body.
3. They act on target organs or cells usually away from their source.
4. Hormones produced in one species usually show similar influence in other species.
5. They are produced in very small quantities and are biologically very active. For example, adrenaline is active even in a concentration of 1 part in 300,000,000 parts.
6. Chemically, some hormones are peptides (proteins such as insulin) which are water soluble, some are amines (derived from amino acids such as adrenaline) again water-soluble and some are steroids derived from cholesterol such as testosterone which are lipid-soluble.
7. Their excess (hypersecretion/oversecretion) or deficiency (hyposecretion/undersecretion), both may lead to serious consequences.
8. Hormones are not stored in the body and are excreted from the system.

Hormone is a secretion from some glandular part of the body, which is poured into blood and which acts on the target organs or cells of the same individual, bringing about coordination between distant parts of the body.

PROGRESS CHECK

1. Fill in the blanks by selecting the appropriate alternative from those given in brackets.
 - (i) Regulation of activities inside the body are brought about by and systems. (nervous/digestive/endocrine)
 - (ii) Hormones are secreted directly into the (organs/lymph/blood).
 - (iii) Chemically, some hormones are, some steroids, some (proteins/amines/carbohydrates).

- (iv) Both or deficiency of hormones lead to serious consequences (excess/absence).
 - (v) Hormones produced in one species usually show influence in other species. (similar/different).
2. Give the characteristics of hormones pertaining to
 - (i) Site of action
 - (ii) Chemical nature
 - (iii) Manner of transportation

10.3 ENDOCRINE GLANDS

The principal endocrine (hormone-producing) glands in the human body have been shown in Fig. 10.1.

These are enumerated below (only the ones in bold face are included in the syllabus):

- | | |
|-------------------|---------------------|
| 1. Adrenal | 2. Pancreas |
| 3. Thyroid | 4. Pituitary |
| 5. Parathyroid | 6. Thymus |
| 7. Gonads | |

We shall try to explain the major functions of each endocrine gland.

Fig. 10.1 : The principal endocrine glands. (Both sexes have the same endocrine glands except the sex glands i.e. ovaries in female and testes in male). The syllabus specifies only four (the ones in boxes 1-4)
