Advocates of school based comprehensive health education programs often use a public health approach to substantiate their position They cite national and statewide statistics about adolescent sexual activity and unsafe sexual practice as a basis for providing students with the facts and the skills to make decisions to prevent pregnancy and the transmission of sexually transmitted diseases Opponents often speak about the parents role in educating their sons and daughters and object to public school instruction that regards homosexuality and safe sex as acceptable choices In the literature many models of community organization focus on the decision making structure within the community rather than on the process of social change Therefore we often know who makes community decisions without knowing much about how and why these decisions are made In this study the process of social change is explored by conducting comparative case studies of two Massachusetts communities California Journal of Elementary Education ,1934 Journal of Education ,1921 New England Journal of Education ,1912
