

Parts of a Flowering Plant

Leaves are where photosynthesis take place. This is where you find most of the chlorophyll in the plant.

The flower is the reproductive part of the plant. It produces seeds which will grow into adult plants.

The roots take water and minerals. They also attach the plant to the ground and make sure it doesn't blow away.

The stem gives the plant support and it helps to position the plant in the sun. The stem also carries water from the roots to the leaves.
