The Industrial History of England Henry de Beltgens Gibbins, 2015-12-22 Example INTRODUCTORY THE ROMANS AND THEIR SUCCESSORS TRADE 1

ALTHOUGH the industrial history of England does not properly begin until the settlement made by the Norman Conquest it is nevertheless impossible to omit some reference to the previous economic condition of the country As everybody knows the Romans were the first to invade Britain although it had been known probably for centuries previously to the Phenicians and Carthaginians who used to sail here for its tin and lead The Romans however first colonized the country and began to develop its resources and they succeeded in introducing various industries and in opening up a considerable commerce Under Roman sway Britain reached a high level of prosperity and there is abundant evidence of this fact from Roman writers They speak of the rich natural productions of Britain of its numerous flocks and herds of its minerals of its various commercial facilities and of the revenues derived from these sources We know that there were no less than fifty nine cities in Britain in the middle of the third century A D and the population was probably fairly large though we have no certain statistics upon this point 1 Large quantities of corn were exported from the land as many as 800 vessels being sent on one occasion to procure corn for the Roman cities in Germany This shows a fairly advanced agriculture Tin also was another important export as indeed it has always been and British slaves were constantly sent to the market at Rome In the country itself great material works such as walled towns paved roads aqueducts and great public buildings were undertaken and remained to testify to the greatness of their builders long after their name had become a distant memory The military system of the Romans helped to produce industrial results for the Roman soldiers took a prominent part in road making building dykes working mines and the great engineering operations that marked the Roman rule The chief towns very largely owed their origin to their importance as military stations and most of them such as York London Chester Lincoln Bath and Colchester have continued ever since to be considerable centres of population though of course with occasional fluctuations When however the Romans finally left Britain in A D 410 both trade and agriculture began to sink the towns decayed and for centuries England became the battle ground of various predatory tribes from the Continent who gradually effected a settlement first in many kingdoms but finally in one and became known as the English or the Anglo Saxon nationality A D 827 To be continue in this ebook "Labor is Not a Commodity!" Philipp Reick,2016 The past decades witnessed a powerful return of struggles against what economic historian Karl Polanyi termed the commodification of social life This book explores how organized workers in two metropolises of the late nineteenth century responded to the commodification of labor In doing so it reveals a striking continuity in collective opposition against the unfettered power of free markets Drawing on contemporary feminist revisions of Polanyian thought this book illustrates the ambiguous potential of movements for social protection Back cover The Jews of Rhode Island George M. Goodwin, Ellen Smith, 2004 A richly illustrated survey of the history and culture of Rhode Island Jews Canadians with Custer Mary Thomas, 2012-08-04 During the Battle of the Little Bighorn 17 Canadians stood by Lieutenant Colonel Custer's side There were 17 Canadians present when Lieutenant Colonel George Armstrong Custer made his last stand in the battle at Little Bighorn River in 1876 Some had served in the Civil War some were close friends or admirers of Custer and some were mercenaries who just wanted a job with adventure William Winer Cooke the scion of two prominent wealthy families in Upper Canada became Custer's right hand man Mark Kellogg a Canadian American was a journalist who joined the expedition by chance and documented the adventure in newspaper articles sent back east Sitting Bull and Crazy Horse were among the leaders of the Sioux and Cheyenne nations victorious warriors in this desperate attempt to save their lands from the white invasion Canadians with Custer tells the stories of the Canadians who joined the 7th Cavalry Regiment of the United States Army and provides new information on Custer's fatal battle (5 v.)
