The Neolithic of the Irish Sea Chris Fowler, 2015-03-31 This collection of 24 papers aims to reconsider the nature and significance of the Irish Sea as an area of cultural interaction during the Neolithic period The traditional character of work across this region has emphasised the existence of prehistoric contact with sea routes criss crossing between Ireland the Isle of Man Anglesey and the British mainland A parallel course of investigation however has demonstrated that the British and Irish Neolithics were in many ways different with distinct indigenous patterns of activity and social practices The recent emphasis on regional studies has further produced evidence for parallel yet different processes of cultural change taking place throughout the British Isles as a whole This volume brings together some of these regional perspectives and compares them across the Irish Sea area The authors consider new ways to explain regional patterning in the use of material objects and relate them to past practices and social strategies Were there practices that were shared across the Irish Sea area linking different styles of monuments and material culture or were the media intrinsic to the message The volume is based on papers presented at a conference held at the University of Manchester in 2002

Britain Begins Barry Cunliffe, 2013-07-18 The story of the origins of the British and the Irish peoples from the end of the last Ice Age around 10 000BC to the eve of the Norman Conquest who they were where they came from and how they related to one another Defining a Regional Neolithic Kenneth Brophy, G. Barclay, 2009-05-29 This book is the ninth published collection of papers from a Neolithic Studies Group day conference and it continues the Group's aim of presenting research on the Neolithic of all parts of the British Isles. The topic regional diversity is an important theme in Neolithic studies today and embraces traditions of monumentality, settlement patterns and material culture. The contributors to this volume address issues of regionality through a series of case studies that focus not on the traditional cores of Wessex and Orkney but rather on other areas: the Irish Sea Zone, Ireland, Scotland, Yorkshire and the Midlands. The volume commences with an introduction by Gordon Barclay that expands on the initial impetus and research questions behind the 2001 conference; this volume is based on this. This is followed by a more abstract contribution analysing that most familiar of tools for the display of regional archaeological data: the distribution map. Kenneth Brophy. Two papers follow that address the role material culture plays in both defining and characterising regional trends: one addressing the distinctive regionality of querns in the Neolithic, Fiona Roe; the other a wide-ranging analysis of high status material culture and monumentality in Yorkshire, Roy Loveday. A series of regional studies follows with three papers focusing explicitly on a range of evidence from the Irish Sea zone: Vicki Cummings, Tom Clare and Aaron Watson, and Richard Bradley. A large and detailed body of evidence from the East Midlands is also considered by Patrick Clay, and the volume is completed by two papers considering very different regional scales in Ireland. At a more localised level, a series of islands off the east coast of Ireland are discussed in a local and wider context by Gabriel Cooney, and a still wider scale approach is taken to landscape and routeways across Ireland as a whole by Carleton Jones. These papers do not simply set up rival distinctive regions but rather suggest that local, regional and national traditions cross-cut and combine in different ways in different places. The interaction between regions is as significant as intra-regional distinctiveness. This volume addresses how we might begin to develop a more nuanced vision of the Neolithic of the British Isles.

The Archaeology and Anthropology of Landscape Robert Layton, Peter Ucko, 2003-09-02 The Archaeology and Anthropology of Landscape contributes to the development of theory in archaeology and anthropology, provides new and varied case studies of landscape and environment from five continents and raises important policy issues concerning development and the management of heritage.

Theory in Archaeology Peter J. Ucko, 2005-08-10 Theory in Archaeology tackles important questions about the diversity in archaeological theory and practice which face the discipline in the 1990s. What is the relationship between theory and practice? How does World archaeological theory differ from European? Can one be a good practitioner without theory? This unique book brings together contributors from many different countries and continents to provide the first truly global perspective on archaeological theory. They examine the nature of material culture studies and look at problems of ethnicity, regionalism and nationality. They consider too another fundamental of archaeological inquiry: can our research be objective or must the past always be a relativistic construction? Theory in Archaeology is an important book whose authors bring together very different perceptions of the past. Its wide scope and interest will attract an international readership among students and academics alike
