

Practicing Purposefully SYSTEMIC PRACTICE

The Tree of Life

The Tree of Life is a tool created by Ncazelo Ncube (2006). It is a metaphorical activity in which each element of the tree is used to tell stories about one's life. The idea is to help the individual to discuss their life and to create a strength based picture of hope and values which helps with a person's identity and can give birth to new positive, stronger narratives they have about themselves.

It is important when doing this piece of work that it is done alongside the person, the professional should be curious and ask questions about the person's life experiences, noticing those shiny moments of strength, the things which have influenced the individual in their life and build upon these stories, thickening them so that they become not only noticeable to the person but also are fully adopted within a person's identity.

It is a helpful tool for individuals to feel connected again to their values, morals, relationships and life experiences. It can be used for those recovering from addictions, mental health, survivors of abuse or trauma. It is equally useful to use with young people as well as adults. It can take several sessions to complete a Tree with someone – this is fine. The therapeutic element is often in the story telling that accompanies the creation of the Tree.

Start with the roots:

Think about where they have come from; their past history; how their past influences them today; favourite memories; list areas they have lived, people they have met, schools they attended, and lessons they've learnt etc.

Ground:

This is the present– so where do they live now? Who do they live with or see regularly? Who has a positive influence on them as a person? What activities do they do in their spare time? What influences are there from everyday life? What values do they have? The ground could be smooth, or maybe a little bumpy, with rocks in there perhaps. However the person wants to demonstrate their life in the 'now' is fine.

Trunk:

The trunk is the person's skills and abilities. Their unique characterisations that make them, them. It could be their hobbies or what they're good at. It could include the perspectives of others here as well, what would others say were their skills and personality traits? If they feel confident in these skills and abilities the trunk may be a thick solid one; if they feel a little unsure or going

Unaccompanied Young Migrants Sue Clayton, Anna Gupta, Katie Willis, 2019-01-30 Taking a multi disciplinary perspective and one grounded in human rights Unaccompanied young migrants explores in depth the journeys migrant youths take through the UK legal and care systems Arriving with little agency what becomes of these children as they grow and assume new roles and identities only to risk losing legal protection as they reach eighteen Through international studies and crucially the voices of the young migrants themselves the book examines the narratives they present and the frameworks of culture and legislation into which they are placed It challenges existing policy and questions from a social justice perspective what the treatment of this group tells us about our systems and the cultural presuppositions on which they depend

Discursive Perspectives in Therapeutic Practice Andy Lock, Tom Strong, 2012-04-05 For an endeavour that is largely based on conversation it may seem obvious to suggest that psychotherapy is discursive After all therapists and clients primarily use talk or forms of discourse to accomplish therapeutic aims However talk or discourse has usually been seen as secondary to the actual business of therapy a necessary conduit for exchanging information between therapist and client but seldom more Psychotherapy primarily developed by mapping particular experiential domains in ways responsive to human intervention Only recently though has the role that discourse plays been recognized as a focus in itself for analysis and intervention Discursive Perspectives in Therapeutic Practice presents an overview of discursive perspectives in therapy along with an account of their conceptual underpinnings The book starts by setting out the case for a discursive and relational approach to therapy by juxtaposing it to the tradition that leads to the diagnostic approach of the DSM V and medical psychiatry It then presents a thorough review of a range of innovative discursive methods each presented by an authority in their respective area The book shows how discursive therapies can help people construct a better sense of their world and move beyond the constraints caused by the cultural preconceptions opinions and values the client has about the world The book makes a unique contribution to the philosophy and psychiatry literature in examining both the philosophical bases of discursive therapy whilst also showing how discursive perspectives can be applied in real therapeutic situations The book will be of great value and interest to psychotherapists and psychiatrists wishing to understand explore and apply these innovative techniques

Building Resilience to Trauma Elaine Miller-Karas, 2015-02-20 After a traumatic experience survivors often experience a cascade of physical emotional cognitive behavioral and spiritual responses that leave them feeling unbalanced and threatened Building Resilience to Trauma explains these common responses from a biological perspective reframing the human experience from one of shame and pathology to one of hope and biology It also presents alternative approaches the Trauma Resiliency Model TRM and the Community Resiliency Model CRM which offer concrete and practical skills that resonate with what we know about the biology of trauma In programs co sponsored by the World Health Organization the Unitarian Universalist Service Committee ADRA International and the department of behavioral health of San Bernardino County the TRM and the CRM have been used to reduce and in some cases eliminate the symptoms of trauma by helping survivors regain a sense of balance Clinicians will find that they can use the models with almost anyone who has experienced or witnessed any event that was perceived as life threatening or posed a serious injury to themselves or to others The models can also be used to treat symptoms of vicarious traumatization and compassion fatigue
