

The Ones Who Walk Away From Omelas

Character Analysis

The focus is primarily on the collective morality of the city's inhabitants rather than individual character development. However, there is a collective characterization of the citizens of Omelas and those who make the choice to walk away. Here's a character analysis of the story's key groups:

The Citizens of Omelas:

The Collective Conscience: The citizens of Omelas collectively represent a society that has made a Faustian bargain. They are portrayed as happy, intelligent, and cultured people who live in harmony, enjoy art, music, and festivities. However, their happiness is contingent upon the suffering of a single innocent child.

Complicity and Rationalization:

These citizens, as a group, are characterized by their complicity in the child's suffering. They are fully aware of the child's existence and the suffering it endures, yet they choose to rationalize this suffering in the name of their own happiness.

The Moral Dilemma:

The collective character of the citizens raises questions about the nature of collective responsibility and the ethical choices made by society as a whole. They represent the tension between individual conscience and societal norms.

The Ones Who Walk Away:

Individual Conscience: Those who walk away from Omelas represent the minority who cannot reconcile themselves to the city's moral compromise. They are not individually named or described in detail, but they collectively symbolize individuals who prioritize their moral values over the collective happiness.

Symbol of Resistance:

These individuals are characterized by their decision to reject the status quo, emphasizing the power of individual conscience and the willingness to take a stand against injustice. They choose to "walk away" from a morally compromised society, even if it means relinquishing their own happiness.
