Kimbel, Lawrence B. Cell Processes in Primates M. Kathleen Pitirri, Joan T. Richtsmeier, 2021-09-14 Many complex traits define the human condition including encephalization and bipedalism The specific molecular signals and cellular processes producing these traits are the result of dramatic evolutionary change At the same time conservation of many of these developmental programs underlie both structure and function Novel methodologies and techniques allow analysis of the collective behavior of cells cell shapes tissues and organs This volume demonstrates the essential role of cellular mechanisms in the evolutionary increase in the size and complexity of the primate brain In addition and concordant with encephalization this book documents changes in the muscles and bones associated with the appearance of bipedalism Genetic changes are the basis of these evolutionary changes but transformation of genetic information into phenotypic outcomes occurs at the level of the cell and this is the focus of the book The goal is to encourage others to adopt evolutionary cell biology as a novel and necessary approach to the genotype phenotype map of the diversification of primates human variation and human evolution The contributors to this book utilize advances in genetic analysis visualization of cells and tissues and the merging of evolutionary developmental biology with evolutionary cell biology to address questions central to understanding the human and primate evolution Key Features Explores mechanisms underlying trait distribution dispersal variation and evolution through the direct testing of hypotheses especially with respect to patterns of encephalization certain sensory modalities and growth and life history specializations Documents the advantages for anthropologists to work at the level of cells focusing on how genes provide instructions for cells to make structure and how environmental influences affect the behavior of cells Illustrates the role cell biology plays with respect to encephalization neocortical expansion variation in facial morphology locomotion and dexterity Describes novel methodologies and techniques allowing analysis of how the collective behavior of cells shapes tissues and organs Related Titles Ripamonti U ed Induction of Bone Formation in Primates The Transforming Growth Factor beta 3 ISBN 978 0 3673 7740 3 Gordon M S et al eds Animal Locomotion Physical Principles and Adaptations ISBN 978 0 3676 5795 6 Bianchi L Developmental Neurobiology ISBN 978 0 8153 4482 7

Primates, Pathogens, and Evolution

Jessica F. Brinkworth, Kate Pechenkina, 2013-08-30 The immune systems of human and non human primates have diverged over time such that some species differ considerably in their susceptibility symptoms and survival of particular infectious diseases Variation in primate immunity is such that major human pathogens such as immunodeficiency viruses herpesviruses and malaria inducing species of Plasmodium elicit striking differences in immune response between closely related species and within primate populations These differences in immunity are the outcome of complex evolutionary processes that include interactions between the host its pathogens and symbiont commensal organisms The success of some pathogens in establishing persistent infections in humans and other primates has been determined not just by the molecular evolution of the pathogen and its interactions with the host but also by the evolution of primate behavior and ecology microflora immune factors and the evolution of other biological systems To explore how interactions between primates and their pathogens have shaped their mutual molecular evolution Primates Pathogens and Evolution brings together research that explores comparative primate immune function the emergence of major and neglected primate diseases primate microorganism molecular interactions and related topics This book will be of interest to anyone curious as to why infectious diseases manifest differently in humans and their closest relatives It will be of particular interest to scholars specializing in human and non human primate evolution epidemiology and immunology and disease ecology Primates Pathogens and Evolution offers an overview and discussion of current findings on differences in the molecular mechanics of primate immune response as well as on pathogen mediated primate evolution and human and non human primate health Barron's Science 360: A

Long-Term Field Studies of Primates Peter M. Kappeler, David P. Watts, 2012-01-07 Some primate field studies have been on going for decades covering significant portions of individual life cycles or even multiple generations In this volume leading field workers report on the history and infrastructure of their projects in Madagascar Africa Asia and South America More importantly they provide summaries of their long term research efforts on primate behaviour ecology and life history highlighting insights that were only possible because of the long term nature of the study The chapters of this volume collectively outline the many scientific reasons for studying primate behaviour ecology and demography over multiple generations This kind of research is typically necessitated by the relatively slow life histories of primates Moreover a complete understanding of social organization and behaviour factors often influenced by rare but important events requires long term data collection Finally long term field projects are also becoming increasingly important foci of local conservation activities

The Functional and Evolutionary Biology of Primates Russell Tuttle, 2017-10-23 These original contributions on the evolution of primates and the techniques for studying the subject cover an enormous range of material and incorporate the work of specialists from many different fields showing the necessity of a multidisciplinary approach to problems of primate morphology and phylogeny Collectively they demonstrate the concerns and methods of leading contemporary workers in this and related fields Each contributor shows his way of attacking fundamental problems of evolutionary primatology

Vision: From Neurons to Cognition C. Casanova, M.
