- Do not point the apparatus in any direction of radiation or heat exposure, otherwise it is damaged (10-15°C change)
- Do not point source in the direction of any moving water flow, apparatus will otherwise result in a hot liquid in stream
- Do not touch the apparatus while it is on or moving
- Do not touch or use any equipment (temperature probe, water meter) for 10 minutes after the apparatus is turned off. This is required to allow the liquid, which is moving along the tube, to cool down, this cooling is in part due to a fan blowing the Peltier device to remove heat from the tube after the power is

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 10-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and heart rate reserve (HRR) of sedentary middle-aged men. The subjects were divided into two groups: a control group and an exercise group. The exercise group performed a 10-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group did not exercise. The HR and HRR were measured at rest and during exercise at the beginning and end of the 10-week period. The results showed that the exercise group had a significant decrease in HR and HRR at rest and during exercise compared to the control group. The control group had no significant change in HR and HRR. The results suggest that a 10-week training program can improve the cardiovascular fitness of sedentary middle-aged men.

If you are not satisfied with your results, follow the instructions carefully and test your original article. If the editor still requests the (a) paragraph and (b) and (c) paragraphs, repeat the analysis with the original data and the original results.
