 Office,1968 Bilingualism and cognitive control Judith F. Kroll,Ingrid Christoffels,Teresa Bajo, Research on bilingual language processing reveals an important role for control processes that enable bilinguals to negotiate the potential competition across their two languages The requirement for control that enables bilinguals to speak the intended language and to switch between languages has also been suggested to confer a set of cognitive consequences for executive function that extend beyond language to domain general cognitive skills Many recent studies have examined aspects of how cognitive control is manifest during bilingual language processing how individual differences in cognitive resources influence second language learning and performance and the range of cognitive tasks that appear to be influenced by bilingualism However not all studies demonstrate a bilingual advantage in all tasks that tap into cognitive control Indeed many questions are unanswered that are critical to our understanding of bilingual control What aspects of cognitive control are enhanced for proficient bilinguals How are individual differences in cognitive control related to language acquisition proficiency or professional translation skill How does the language environment affect concurrent processing How exactly does language control come about in tasks such as speech production switching between languages or translation When and how does inhibitory processing support language control The focus of this Research Topic is on executive control and bilingualism The goal is to have a broad scope that includes all of these issues We seek empirical contributions using different methodologies including behavioral computational and neuroscience approaches We also welcome theoretical contributions that provide detailed discussion of models or mechanisms that account for the relationship between bilingualism and cognitive control We aim to provide a platform for new contributions that represent a state of the art overview of approaches to cognitive control in bilingualism We hope that this Research Topic will enable the field to formulate more precise hypotheses and causal models on the relation between individual differences cognitive control and bilingual language processing Macromolecular Crystallography Mark R. Sanderson, Jane V. Skelly, 2007-08-23 Macromolecular Crystallography is the study of macromolecules proteins and nucleic acids using X ray crystallographic techniques in order to determine their molecular structure The knowledge of accurate molecular structures is a pre requisite for rational drug design and for structure based function studies to aid the development of effective therapeutic agents and drugs The successful determination of the complete genome genetic sequence of several species including humans has recently directed scientific attention towards identifying the structure and function of the complete complement of proteins that make up that species a new and rapidly growing field of study called structural genomics There are now several important and well funded global initiatives in operation to identify all of the proteins of key model species One of the main requirements for these initiatives is a high throughput crystallization facility to speed up the protein identification process The extent to which these technologies have advanced calls for an updated review of current crystallographic theory and practice This practical reference book features the latest conventional and high throughput methods and includes contributions from a team of internationally recognized leaders and experts It will be of relevance and use to graduate students research scientists and professionals currently working in the field of conventional and high throughput macromolecular crystallography
