Strategies for Teaching Critical Thinking.

Bonnie Potts,
American Institutes for Research

Critical thinking skills figure prominently among the goals for education, whether one asks developers of curricula, educational researchers, parents, or employers. Although there are some quite diverse definitions of critical thinking, nearly all emphasize the ability and tendency to gather, evaluate, and use information effectively (Beyer, 1985).

In this article, we discuss skills related to critical thinking and three specific strategies for teaching these skills: 1) Building Categories, 2) Finding Problems, and 3) Enhancing the Environment.

SKILLS RELATED TO CRITICAL THINKING

Across subject areas and levels, educational research has identified several discrete skills related to an overall ability for critical thinking. These are:

- Finding analogies and other kinds of relationships between pieces of information
- Determining the relevance and validity of information that could be used for structuring and solving problems
- Finding and evaluating solutions or alternative ways of treating problems

Just as there are similarities among the definitions of critical thinking across subject areas and levels, there are several generally recognized "hallmarks" of teaching for critical thinking (see, for example, Beyer, 1985; Costa, 1985). These include:

- Promoting interaction among students as they learn - Learning in a group setting often helps each member achieve more.
- Asking open-ended questions that do not assume the "one right answer" - Critical thinking is often exemplified best when the problems are inherently ill-defined and do not have a "right" answer. Open-ended questions also encourage students to think and respond creatively, without fear of giving the "wrong" answer.
- Allowing sufficient time for students to reflect on the questions asked or problems posed - Critical thinking seldom involves snap judgments; therefore, posing questions and allowing adequate time before soliciting responses helps students understand that they are expected to deliberate and to ponder, and that the immediate response is not always the best response.
- Teaching for transfer - The skills for critical thinking should "travel well." They generally will do so only if teachers provide opportunities for students to see how a newly acquired skill can apply to other situations and to the student's own experience.

BUILDING CATEGORIES (after Seiger-Ehrenberg, 1985)

Students often are given (and asked to memorize) explicit rules for classifying information. For example, there is a set of criteria for determining whether a word is being used as a noun or as a verb. The Building Categories strategy, however, is an inductive reasoning tool that helps students categorize information by discovering the rules rather than merely memorizing them. Such active learning typically results in better understanding and better retention of the concepts and related material than is possible with a more directive teaching method.

Example: Distinguishing animals from plants. Students work in two groups (Animal Group and Plant Group). Worksheets prepared in advance ask for information about life span, energy sources, motility, anatomy, etc., of several different animals and plants. Once the information is collected, it is compiled into large wall charts (one for Animals, one for Plants).

At this point, some questions can be posed to both groups at once: What are the similarities among the members of each group? What are the differences between the two groups? How could the following statement be completed: "An animal is different from a plant because..." The teacher provides appropriate feedback throughout, using open-ended questions to help students identify inadequate or inaccurate categorization rules.

All Bullshit and Lies? Chris Heffer,2020 In a postfactual world in which claims are often held to be true only to the extent that they confirm pre existing or partisan beliefs this book asks crucial questions how can we identify the many forms of untruthfulness in discourse How can we know when their use is ethically wrong How can we judge untruthfulness in the messiness of situated discourse Drawing on pragmatics philosophy psychology and law All Bullshit and Lies develops a comprehensive framework for analyzing untruthful discourse in situated context TRUST or Trust related Untruthfulness in Situated Text sees untruthfulness as encompassing not only deliberate manipulations of what is believed to be true the insincerity of withholding misleading and lying but also the distortions that arise from an irresponsible attitude towards the truth dogma distortion and bullshit Chris Heffer discusses times when truth is not in play as in jokes or fiction as well as instances when concealing the truth can achieve a greater good The TRUST framework demonstrates that untruthfulness becomes unethical in discourse though when it unjustifiably breaches the trust an interlocutor invests in the speaker In addition to the theoretical framework this book provides a clear practical heuristic for analyzing discursive untruthfulness and applies it to such cases of public discourse as the Brexit battle bus Trump's tweet about voter fraud Blair and Bush's claims about weapons of mass destruction and the multiple forms of untruthfulness associated with the Skripal poisoning case In All Bullshit and Lies Chris Heffer turns a critical eye to fundamental questions of truthfulness and trust in our society This timely and interdisciplinary investigation of discourse provides readers a deeper theoretical understanding of untruthfulness in a postfactual world Dynamic Thinking Gregor Schöner, John P.
