

BACKGROUND:

Reflection of light from a surface is what allows us to see objects that are not luminous. Different colored objects reflect different colors of light. A mirror is a smooth surface that reflects light in such a way that we can view images of objects.

Law of Reflection:

The Law of Reflection states that if the incoming light forms an angle of incidence ( $\theta_i$ ) with a line normal to the surface, then the light reflected off the surface will form an angle of reflection ( $\theta_r$ ) with the normal line which is equal to the angle of incidence.

This is shown in Figure 1.

$$\theta_i = \theta_r$$

Refraction occurs when light changes direction as it passes from one medium to another. For example, a straw in a glass of water may appear bent or disjointed at the surface of the water because the direction of propagation of the light changes when traveling between water, glass, and air.

Law of Refraction:

Snell's Law states that if the incoming light is traveling in a medium with an index of refraction of  $n_1$  and forms an angle of  $\theta_1$  with a line normal to the surface as shown in Figure 2, then the light that enters the second medium of index  $n_2$  will form an angle of  $\theta_2$  with the normal line where the refracted angle is given by the equation

$$n_1 \sin\theta_1 = n_2 \sin\theta_2$$

Snell's Law predicts that the light will get bent toward the perpendicular line if  $n_1 < n_2$  (such as for light in air entering glass) and will get bent away from the perpendicular line if  $n_1 > n_2$  (such as for light in glass entering air).
