Degrees for a New Generation Mary Emison,2013-05-01 Degrees for a New Generation charts an extraordinary journey undertaken by the University of Melbourne In 2005 the University agreed on a broad notion of curriculum reform by 2008 it had the first intake of students into its new Melbourne Model undergraduate courses by 2011 the first cohort had graduated and the University shifted its professional programs to graduate level entry It was a massive at times controversial transformation of an old and large institution which ultimately has left no aspect of the University untouched Mary Emison s detailed insightful account of the making of the Melbourne Model highlights the processes people and groups involved in planning implementing and managing these radical changes It traces the story from the consultative beginnings led by Vice Chancellor Glyn Davis through the assiduous work of course design and transition led by Peter McPhee involving generous commitments of time energy and reflection from a great many professional and academic staff Emison shows that academic structures in a large university can be transformed to offer a flexible approach to tertiary education that fits with a changing global environment

adulterant substances in everyday products even down to parts per billion concentrations We can now detect the presence of harmful ingredients at levels so low that they actually cause no harm Nonetheless we get scared We are now able to overreact to harmless negligible sources of contamination and flock to natural organic and chemical free alternative products at elevated prices instead This urge is driven in part by a set of interesting psychological quirks called the naturalness preference or biophilia While exposure to many aspects of nature improves our physical and mental wellbeing marketers are taking advantage of our naturalness preference by selling us organic and natural products with no functional advantage sometimes to the detriment of the environment and that have the unfortunate added effect of peddling a fear of conventional products that do not make such natural connotations This fear of chemicals exaggerated by marketers has led some of us to seek nature in the form of expensive consumer product which offer almost none of the benefits of spending time outdoors in real nature which is free of charge We thus chase nature in the wrong form We feel guilt anxiety and mental stress from being coaxed into paying a hefty premium price for natural products that are neither safer nor more effective than conventional ones and forget to appreciate real nature in the process This book explores the history of chemical fears and the recent events that amplified it It describes how consumers teachers doctors lawmakers and journalists can help make better connections with the public by telling stories that are more engaging about chemistry and materials science Written in a sympathetic way this book explains both sides of the argument for anyone with an interest in science
