Therapeutic Relationship Resources The therapeutic relationship is the foundation of CBT. It is a collaborative partnership between the therapist and the client, based on trust, respect, and empathy. The therapist's role is to provide a safe and supportive environment for the client to explore their thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. The client's role is to actively participate in the therapy process and work on their goals. The therapeutic relationship is essential for the success of CBT.	Session Structure The structure of a CBT session is typically as follows: 1. Check-in: The therapist and client discuss how the client is feeling and any issues that have arisen since the last session. 2. Agenda setting: The therapist and client agree on the topics to be discussed during the session. 3. Assessment: The therapist assesses the client's current thoughts, feelings, and behaviors. 4. Intervention: The therapist uses CBT techniques to help the client identify and challenge their negative thoughts and feelings, and to develop more positive and adaptive thoughts and feelings. 5. Homework assignment: The therapist assigns homework to the client to practice the skills learned in session.	Problem Solving Resources Problem solving is a key component of CBT. It involves identifying the problem, generating possible solutions, evaluating the pros and cons of each solution, and choosing the best solution to implement. The therapist can help the client with problem solving by providing guidance and support. The client can also use problem solving techniques on their own to address their problems.	Session Preparation Resources The therapist can prepare for a session by reviewing the client's history and current issues. The client can prepare for a session by reflecting on their thoughts and feelings, and by identifying their goals for the session. Both the therapist and the client can use various resources to prepare for a session, such as worksheets, handouts, and videos.

Non-pharmacological Interventions for Mental Disorders Lara Guedes De Pinho, César Fonseca, Manuel Lopes, Brooke Schneider, Łukasz Gawęda, 2024-04-01 One of the side effects of the COVID 19 pandemic was the worsening of the symptomatology of mental disorders. The number of people with mental disorders has increased and pre-existing mental disorders have worsened in many cases. Psychopharmacology alone is not sufficient for the treatment of conditions such as schizophrenia, depression, bipolar disorder, and generalized anxiety disorder, among others, and the combined use of psychopharmacology and non-pharmacological interventions is recommended by international guidelines. Despite this, most people around the world do not have access to non-pharmacological interventions, and when they are diagnosed with a mental disorder, only psychopharmacological drugs are prescribed.
