China's Digital Dream Junhua Zhang, Martin Woesler, 2004 The Internet in China as liberating technology Katarzyna Skorska, 2024-08-19 Seminar paper from the year 2023 in the subject Asian studies grade 1 7 Humboldt University of Berlin language English abstract China joined the Internet in 1994 year becoming the earliest country to mark this achievement in Asia but in the world taking 71th place registering to the global network Use of the Internet in China has dramatically changed from 22 million users in 2000 to 854 millions in 2020 That makes every second citizen in China 59.3% precisely being on the Internet In 2021 the percentage of the Chinese population on the Web skyrocketed to 70% with 1.01 billion users In this essay I argue that the advent of the Internet in China is not liberating in both two dimensions outside of the Internet referring to the digital divide and on the Internet for netizens Moreover Virtual China rather resembles an endless mouse and cat game With mouse being the official authorities and cat chinese netizens Although it could have a liberating potential it is not very effective On the other hand it also contributes to social inequalities as not every citizen has access to the Internet or simply the will as in the case of elderly group to actively use it This all deepens social tensions which are destructive for the mass mobilization that is so much needed in the fight for democracy The battlefield for the and on Internet counties endlessly without the clear winner As soon as one side of the duvet Internet is trying to pull into one s direction the other side responds instantly pulling into one s side For the authorities the Internet is being implemented as an instrument of digital authoritarianism Chinese netizens however recognize in the Internet the potential of liberating technology They are proactively trying to make use of its own needs by online protests posts and comments that criticize mock and satirize the ruling power They do it as long as they are not being caught by online censors or outside of the Web by officers and judicial authorities The Internet in China Gianluigi Negro, 2017 The Internet in China Ashley Esarey, Randolph Kluver, 2014 Internet in China a Berkshire Essential provides unique and much needed historical background on the communications revolution and technological developments that have transformed Chinese society creating new conflicts and new opportunities for the nation s half a billion netizens This convenient handbook covers the role of the internet in business and economy governance and politics civil society and social welfare More than forty international experts many of them Chinese write about community building and social networking online dating and romance government regulation education and entertainment and phenomenon specific to China including the Great Firewall and microblogging

The Internet in China Xixue Tai, 2007-05-07 The Internet in China examines the cultural and political ramifications of the Internet for Chinese society The rapid growth of the Internet has been enthusiastically embraced by the Chinese government but the government has also rushed to seize control of the virtual environment Individuals have responded with impassioned campaigns against official control of information The emergence of a civil society via cyberspace has had profound effects upon China for example in 2003 based on an Internet campaign the Chinese Supreme People's Court overturned the ruling of a local court for the first time since the Communist Party came to power in 1949 The important question this book asks is not whether the Internet will democratize China but rather in what ways the Internet is democratizing communication in China How is the Internet empowering individuals by fostering new types of social spaces and redefining existing social relations

China's Emerging New Economy Seok Ling Nah, John Wong, 2000-12-20 The New Economy has hit China driven by the Internet and e commerce China has made a good start in both areas Since its debut subscribers to the Internet grew exponentially from a mere 1 600 in 1994 to 16 9 million in mid 2000 E commerce transactions registered a total revenue of 200 million yuan in 1999 or twice as much as in 1998 B2C e commerce is expected to grow by 300% in 2000 However the rapid growth of the sectors is constrained by factors such as a small base of registered users high costs of using the Internet government control of information access and lack of an effective distribution network and financial linkage Internet businesses are also losing money due to exorbitant charges for telephone lines an uncertain regulatory environment and direct competition from the telecommunications operators dominating the market Nonetheless the high growth potential of the two sectors is still well recognized by foreign multinationals Despite China's manifest prohibition of foreign involvement foreign companies have managed to enter the Chinese market by forming strategic alliances with domestic concerns It appears that China prefers a smooth and orderly process of market opening based on a more effective regulatory regime such as licensing arrangements This book is intended for readers interested in China's Internet and e commerce sectors Businessmen corporate planners business associates researchers engineers technologists academics and students interested in these industries will find the book useful Focusing on China's nascent Internet and e commerce industries this book presents the historical development current market status and future growth as well as discusses the problems and issues facing the two sectors
