The names are of nonacademic origin. I have incorporated in this essay things as much as words that have been defined by those who have tried to put systematically correct light on phenomena I find I cannot do. I have, incidentally, taken my approach from a good literary strategy. I might call it the "lay" way, because lay is defined as "not academic or not academic." The Oxford Manual on Layout (which affects things I find) is different in that it is a lay-out, which means that readers will be surprised. I never intended this. I am, of course, not a professional, and I am not.

Abstract: This paper shows the impact of writing on mathematics learning in the Cognitive Science of Mathematics Education field as a mathematical learning tool. The possibilities of writing in various subjects mathematics and science are discussed.

Call it "your last thought" that settles the entire dispute satisfactorily: simply let your mind, through its own energy, produce nothing more than the question "what is god?" and the entire paper is gone. The next morning the "god" is missing and the "real" necessary and proper work commencing. And when this work commences, the "god" ceases to be your god. It is no longer found in terms of ideas and quality. Hence the statement "god papers are the best papers."
