Review of the Renal System

The Basics: blood enters kidney → blood is filtered & waste is removed → filtered blood returns to body → waste is sent to bladder

Functions of the Kidneys

- Filtration (waste elimination) – any excess electrolytes, proteins, & solutes not needed in the body
- Fluid & electrolyte balance – the filtration process helps to maintain the fluid & electrolyte balance through the use of ADH and aldosterone
- Acid-base balance – kidneys regulate hydrogen and bicarb reabsorption and secretion
 - Hydrogen ions excreted through filtration & forms bicarb to buffer & maintain the body's pH
- Blood pressure regulation – regulated through the RAAS system through the use of aldosterone, renin, & ADH
- Erythropoietin production (for RBC synthesis) –when decreased oxygenation levels in the arteries, anemia, &/or decreased renal perfusion occurs, kidneys secrete erythropoietin to help stimulate synthesis of RBC's
- Vit D conversion and Ca++ balance – kidneys synthesize components to make vitamin D to help absorb calcium in the GI tract & prevent calcium from being released from the bones
- Glucose homeostasis – kidneys filter & reabsorb glucose, trying to retrieve as much as possible
 - Any excess glucose is secreted in the urine

*kidneys normally do NOT filter blood cells or proteins (important to understand for later)

Anatomy of the Kidneys & Urinary System

- Nephrons: functional unit of the kidneys responsible for removing waste & excess substances from the blood (regulation of blood plasma volume & solute concentration)
 - Adjusts volume of water lost in urine
 - Stabilized blood pH by controlling loss of hydrogen ions and bicarb in urine
- Glomerulus: a collection of blood capillaries in each nephron that filters blood
 - GFR (glomerular filtration rate): amount of fluid filtered from the blood into the glomerular capsule
 - normal rate is 120-125 ml/min
 - factors that influence GFR: total surface area available for filtration, permeability of the membrane, and net filtration pressure
- Proximal convoluted tubule (PCT): reabsorbs chloride, bicarb, glucose, sodium, and water from the glomerular filtrate
- Loop of Henle: recovers water and sodium chloride from the urine
 - Descending loop – has thin and permeable membrane to reabsorb water into the bloodstream
 - Ascending loop – thicker and less permeable to water, but absorbs sodium and chloride
 - Urine becomes more concentrated here
- Distal convoluted tube (DCT) & collecting ducts: involved w/ secreting solutes into the filtrate rather than reabsorbing substances into it
 - Collecting ducts receive urine and channels it into renal pelvis & into ureter
- Ureter: transports urine to bladder (12-18 in long)
 - Pair of muscular tubes
 - Move urine to bladder by peristalsis
- Urinary bladder: stores urine (up to 1 liter) temporarily prior to elimination
 - Muscular organ
 - Detrusor muscle expels urine when contracted
- Urethra: conducts urine to exterior
 - Micturition reflex – 300-500 ml of urine increases internal bladder pressure → internal urethral sphincter relaxes & signals need to void
 - External urethral sphincter: acts as a valve, voluntary muscle relaxes permitting micturition
 - Male urethra divided into 3 (prostatic, membranous, and spongy)
 - Female urethra – very short (3-5 cm), extends from bladder to vestibule
