War Reporting For Cowards Chris Ayres:

War Reporting for Cowards Chris Ayres, 2007-12-01 Imagine George Costanza from Seinfeld being sent off to cover the Iraq War. Hilarious. Michiko Kakutani The New York Times. Chris Ayres is a small town boy, a hypochondriac and a neat freak with an anxiety disorder. Not exactly the picture of a war correspondent. But when his boss asks him if he would like to go to Iraq, he doesn't have the guts to say no. After signing a one million dollar life insurance policy, studying a tutorial on repairing severed limbs and spending twenty thousand dollars on camping gear, only to find out that his bright yellow tent makes him a sitting duck, Ayres is embedded with a battalion of gung ho Marines who either shun him or threaten him when he files an unfavorable story. As time goes on, though, he begins to understand them and his inexplicably enthusiastic fellow war reporters more and more. Each night of terrifying combat brings in the morning something more visceral than he has ever experienced, the thrill of having won a fight for survival. War Reporting for Cowards tells with self-deprecating wit the story of Iraq in a way that is extraordinarily honest and bitterly hilarious. The New Yorker. Heartbreakingly funny. Anthony Swofford, author of Jarhead. Chris Ayres has invented a new genre, a rip-roaring tale of adventure and derring-do. Toby Young, author of How to Lose Friends and Alienate People. Darkly entertaining. Los Angeles Times. Ayres's stories of life with Marines are gripping in part because he's the perfect neurotic foil. People.

Honor James Bowman, 2007. From the earliest records of human civilization until the dawn of the twentieth century and in widely separated cultures throughout the world, the story of honor was inseparable from the story of mankind. Today, an acquaintance with the concept of honor is indispensable to understanding the culture of the Islamic world and its sense of grievance against the West, where honor has been disregarded or actively despised for three quarters of a century. James Bowman draws from a wealth of sources across many centuries to illuminate honor's curious history in our own culture, and he discovers that Western honor was always different from that found elsewhere. Its idiosyncratic qualities derived partly from the classical tradition but mainly from the Judeo-Christian heritage, whose emphases on individual morality and more recently on sincerity and authenticity in private and personal life have acted as continual challenges to the traditional notion of honor as it is still maintained in other parts of the world. These challenges to honor and the accommodations with it that they ultimately produced are a fundamental theme in our own culture's distinctive history, and the eventual collapse of the honor culture in the West is the background against which the War on Terror and the Clash of Civilizations ought to be seen. Shooting the Messenger Paul L. Moorcraft, Philip M. Taylor, 2008-06-30. As the literature on military media relations grows, it is informed by antagonism either from journalists who report on wars or from ex-soldiers in their memoirs. Academics who attempt more judicious accounts rarely have any professional military or media experience. A working knowledge of the operational constraints of both professions underscores Shooting the Messenger. A veteran war correspondent and think tank director, Paul L. Moorcraft has served in the British Ministry of Defence, while historian by training, Philip M. Taylor is a professor of international communications who has lectured widely to the U S military and at NATO institutions Some of the topics they examine in this wide ranging history of military media relations are the interface between soldiers and civilian reporters covering conflicts the sometimes grey area between reporters right or need to know and the operational security constraints imposed by the military the military s manipulation of journalists who accept it as a trade off for safer battlefield access the resultant gap between images of war and their reality the evolving nature of media technology and the difficulties and opportunities this poses to the military journalistic performance in reporting conflict as an observer or a participant Moorcraft and Taylor provide a bridge over which each side can pass and a path to mutual understanding Dying for the Truth Paul L.

Kriegskorrespondenten Barbara Korte, Horst Tonn, 2008-05-09
 Kriegskorrespondenten haben aktuell eine hohe mediale und kulturelle Präsenz. Aus sozial-medien- und kulturwissenschaftlicher Perspektive reflektieren die Beiträge in diesem Band die gegenwärtige und die historische Rolle von Berichterstattern bei der Deutung von Kriegswirklichkeiten in verschiedenen Medien und in verschiedenen kulturellen Kontexten. Besondere Aufmerksamkeit gilt dabei der Selbst-Inszenierung von Kriegsreportern in Literatur und Film.

The New Yorker Harold Wallace Ross, William Shawn, Tina Brown, David Remnick, Katharine Sergeant Angell, White, Rea Irvin, Roger Angell, 2005
Represented Reporters Barbara Korte, 2015-07-15
 War correspondents are prominent actors in the media world. They took hold in the cultural imaginary soon after their profession had been created in the mid 19th century. With a particular focus on Britain, this study investigates the representation of war correspondents from Victorian times to the present in memoirs, novels and films. Such representations react to prevailing notions that exist about war reporters and participate in their further construction. With its cultural approach, this book complements studies of war correspondents in media and communication studies, history and ethnology.

Shooting the Messenger Paul Moorcraft, 2011-10-31
 Wars have dominated politics since history began. In the modern era, most of what the media reports on foreign conflicts comes from a small band of war correspondents. As the furore over the Iraq, Afghan and now the Libyan wars demonstrates, Western governments and militaries often collude to keep their voters in the dark about the causes and the conduct of wars waged in their name. In this entertaining and unspun account of modern war reporting, the authors ask whether the media itself drives democracies to war. Or does it serve to constrain evil, ignorant and messianic leaders? Are the heirs of William Howard Russell the first modern war reporter watchdogs or lapdogs? In the age of Wikileaks and corrupt media empires, what is the political impact of war correspondents? Are they the heroes or harlots of their profession?

Representing Genocide Rebecca Jinks, 2016-06-02
 This book explores the diverse ways in which Holocaust representations have influenced and structured how other genocides are understood and represented in the West. Rebecca Jinks focuses in particular on the canonical 20th century cases of genocide: Armenia, Cambodia, Bosnia and Rwanda. Using literature, film, photography and memorialisation, she demonstrates that we can only understand the Holocaust's status as a benchmark for other genocides if we look at the deeper structural resonances which subtly shape many representations of genocide. Representing Genocide pursues five thematic areas in turn: how genocides are recognised as such by western publics; the representation of the origins and perpetrators of genocide; how western witnesses represent genocide; representations of the aftermath of genocide and western responses to genocide. Throughout the book, it distinguishes between mainstream and other more nuanced and engaged representations of genocide. It shows how these mainstream representations, the majority, largely replicate the representational framework of the Holocaust, including the way in which mainstream Holocaust representations resist recognising the rationality instrumentality and normality of genocide preferring instead to present it as an aberrant exceptional event in human society By contrast the more engaged representations often but not always originating from those who experienced genocide tend to revolve around precisely genocide's ordinariness and the structures and situations common to human society which contribute to and become involved in the violence
