concealed by the blooming and buzzing confusion as William James described the infant's world. Much research has been carried out on the mechanisms by which organisms recognize and relate to their conspecifics in particular with respect to language acquisition and face recognition. Given this background it seems worthwhile to compare not only the conceptual advances made in these two domains but also the methodological difficulties faced in each of them. In both domains there is evidence of sophisticated abilities right from birth. Similarly, researchers in these domains have focused on whether the mechanisms underlying these early competences are modality specific, object specific or otherwise.
