During fresh fruit and vegetables (FFV) production, water is used for a variety of purposes. Even the water was conventionally treated and disinfected, it may still potentially contain human pathogens, albeit at low concentrations. A risk assessment appropriate to the national or local production context should be conducted to assess the potential risks associated with a specific water source or supply in order to devise the appropriate risk mitigation strategies. Since the 48th session of Codex Committee on Food Hygiene (CCFH) noted the importance of water safety and quality in food production and processing, FAO and WHO has undertaken the work on this subject. This report describes the output of the third in a series of meetings which examined appropriate and fit-for-purpose microbiological criteria for water used with fresh fruit and vegetables. The advice herein will support decision making when applying the concept of fit-for-purpose water for use in the pre and post harvest production of fresh fruit and vegetables. Water Safety Instructor Manual Canadian Red Cross Society. Bunker e Thorpe (1982) desenvolveram o Teaching Games for Understanding (TGfU) traduzido como modelo de Ensino dos Jogos para Compreensão, como uma nova abordagem ao ensino do desporto centrada no jogo e no estudante jogador, com o objetivo de ultrapassar as limitações encontradas nas práticas tradicionais que utilizavam situações descontextualizadas. Desde então, a Educação Desportiva Integral tem ganhado um lugar na literatura em nível internacional. No entanto, surgiram várias abordagens semelhantes ou adaptações culturais desse modelo pedagógico, o que levou à necessidade de criar um termo guarda-chuva que engloba todos eles, a chamada Abordagem centrada no jogo. Muitos artigos e livros foram publicados nas últimas décadas incorporando o grande potencial educacional dos vários Modelos Baseados no Jogo para aumentar a motivação na prática, na transferência teórica no desenvolvimento da tomada de decisão dos jogadores e no desenvolvimento holístico da competência desportiva. No entanto, existe uma lacuna na educação desportiva em ambientes extracurriculares. Este livro apresenta sete capítulos, o primeiro fornece uma introdução aos Modelos Baseados no Jogo, destacando características e benefícios comuns na prática. A seguir, são apresentados os seis capítulos seguintes. Cinco desses capítulos concentram-se em cada uma das categorias desportivas: desportos de invasão, rede e parede, campo e tacaço, alvo e desportos individuais, buscando fornecer estratégias para a sua utilização numa variedade de contextos. Finalmente, no último capítulo, aborda a questão da hibridização ou combinação de modelos pedagógicos em que são especificadas, de um ponto de vista teórico-prático, atualizado, todas as hibridizações que tenham sido utilizadas em um Modelo Centrado no Jogo, com outros modelos pedagógicos, para contrariar as possíveis limitações que a aplicação de um único modelo apresenta. Em suma, um livro altamente recomendado para melhorar a qualidade da prática, tanto para professores de Educação Física, como para treinadores desportivos. Além disso, os estudantes relacionados com a educação ou as áreas de esportes podem aprender orientações metodológicas na tentativa de desenvolver jogadores com alfabetização motora a partir de uma perspectiva holística, formando jogadores inteligentes e tendo em conta os valores positivos do esporte para promover estilos de vida ativos.
