southern Africa And so it went Most previous historians of the gold rushes have tended to view them as acts of spontaneous nationalism Each country likes to see its own gold rush as the one that either shaped those that followed or epitomized all the rest In The Gold Crusades A Social History of Gold Rushes 1849-1929 Douglas Fetherling takes a different approach Fetherling argues that the gold rushes in the United States Canada Australia New Zealand and South Africa shared the same causes and results the same characters and characteristics He posits that they were in fact a single discontinuous event an expression of the British imperial experience and nineteenth century liberalism He does so with dash and style and with a sharp eye for the telling anecdote the out of the way document and the bold connection between seemingly unrelated disciplines Originally published by Macmillan of Canada 1988 Manual NGB, United States.
