Evaluating Information Retrieval and Access Tasks Tetsuya Sakai, Douglas W. Oard, Noriko Kando, 2020-09-01 This open access book summarizes the first two decades of the NII Testbeds and Community for Information access Research NTCIR NTCIR is a series of evaluation forums run by a global team of researchers and hosted by the National Institute of Informatics NII Japan The book is unique in that it discusses not just what was done at NTCIR but also how it was done and the impact it has achieved For example in some chapters the reader sees the early seeds of what eventually grew to be the search engines that provide access to content on the World Wide Web today s smartphones that can tailor what they show to the needs of their owners and the smart speakers that enrich our lives at home and on the move We also get glimpses into how new search engines can be built for mathematical formulae or for the digital record of a lived human life Key to the success of the NTCIR endeavor was early recognition that information access research is an empirical discipline and that evaluation therefore lay at the core of the enterprise Evaluation is thus at the heart of each chapter in this book They show for example how the recognition that some documents are more important than others has shaped thinking about evaluation design The thirty three contributors to this volume speak for the many hundreds of researchers from dozens of countries around the world who together shaped NTCIR as organizers and participants This book is suitable for researchers practitioners and students anyone who wants to learn about past and present evaluation efforts in information retrieval information access and natural language processing as well as those who want to participate in an evaluation task or even to design and organize one

Machine Translation: From Real Users to Research Robert E. Frederking, Kathryn B. Taylor, 2004-09-08 The previous conference in this series AMTA 2002 took up the theme From Research to Real Users and sought to explore why recent research on data driven machine translation didn't seem to be moving to the marketplace As it turned out the first commercial products of the data driven research movement were just over the horizon and in the intervening two years they have begun to appear in the marketplace At the same time rule based machine translation systems are introducing data driven techniques into the mix in their products Machine translation as a software application has a 50 year history There are an increasing number of exciting deployments of MT many of which will be exhibited and discussed at the conference But the scale of commercial use has never approached the estimates of the latent demand In light of this we reversed the question from AMTA 2002 to look at the next step in the path to commercial success for MT We took user needs as our theme and explored how or whether market requirements are feeding into research programs The transition of research discoveries to practical use involves technical questions that are not as sexy as those that have driven the research community and research funding Important product issues such as system customizability computing resource requirements and usability and fitness for particular tasks need to engage the creative energies of all parts of our community especially research as we move machine translation from a niche application to a more pervasive language conversion process These topics were addressed at the conference through the papers contained in these proceedings and even more specifically through several invited presentations and panels Experimental IR Meets
