

Rodley: Right ... yeah ... it's a good example of ... actually, it's a helpful example. Now for the third technique. This one's called "grouping" or "categorizing" information. You can learn and remember better if you can group related bits of information into meaningful categories. So, uh ... if we're learning a new language, it's much better to organize new words into categories like ... uh ... like all the words to do with a house go into one group. Then you have sub-groups.

Interviewer: ... so the subgroups for "house" could be kitchen, bedroom, etc.?

Rodley: Exactly ... exactly right. Okay, that's organizing ideas. Have you heard of mnemonics?

Interviewer: Sure, what?

Rodley: Mnemonics ... you use a sentence, or a word or maybe a short poem to help you remember something.

Interviewer: Can you give our listeners an example, please?

Rodley: Sure. Okay, so, uh ... a simple example. My daughter

Rodley: I know. Okay, why test the memory of something called mental visualization. Simply put, it's a picture of the human brain's sensory input is visual. Just imagine that ... simply put, it's so most of us "remember" what we see much, much better than what we hear or read. So this mental visualization is a powerful memory principle. Make a mental picture of what needs to be remembered.

Interviewer: Do you illustrate this in your life?

Rodley: Absolutely! Making a picture of the new information will help you to remember it much better. Take, for example, speakers. Almost all speakers use graphs, charts, and pictures when they present information to people.

Rodley: "... a thousand words."

Interviewer: Yeah, yeah. I ... "a picture is worth a thousand words." Well, Duane, thank you so much for ...
