FIVE SENSES READING COMPREHENSION Reading

Read the first three of Reading Comprehension Book 1.

Remember: The five senses – sight, touch, taste, smell, and hearing – are essential for us to learn about our world. We learn about our world through our five senses. We use our five senses to learn about our world. We use our five senses to learn about our world.

Figure 1: Light enters our eyes and travels through the eye to the back of the eye where it is converted into a signal that the brain can understand. This signal is then sent to the brain where it is processed and we see the world around us.

Figure 2: Sound waves enter our ears and travel through the ear to the back of the ear where it is converted into a signal that the brain can understand. This signal is then sent to the brain where it is processed and we hear the world around us.

Figure 3: Taste buds on our tongue are able to detect different tastes. These tastes are sweet, salty, sour, bitter, and umami. These tastes are sent to the brain where they are processed and we taste the world around us.

Figure 4: Smell is detected by the nose. The nose is able to detect different smells. These smells are sent to the brain where they are processed and we smell the world around us.

Figure 5: Touch is detected by the skin. The skin is able to detect different touches. These touches are sent to the brain where they are processed and we feel the world around us.
