Scientific and practical principles of development of territorial communities in the conditions of decentralization of power Baldynyuk V., Dmytrenko R., Furman I., Kolesnyk T., Feniak L., Pronko L., Bereziuk S., Shevchuk H., Tokarchuk D., Yaremchuk N., Zelenchuk N., 2022-06-09 Today in the conditions of transformation of public consciousness which is the source and driving force of changes in our society it is the person with his needs and interests who is at the center of these changes and determines the vector of society as a whole In the context of decentralization of power which implies more rights and consequently responsibilities to local communities their effective management requires well considered and sound decisions The study of the state of rural development confirms the fact that only the integrated development of regions including communities ensure their stability and the most efficient use of resource potential Well considered decisions of community leaders will promote the development of entrepreneurship in the regions and the state as a whole Balanced tax and credit policies will provide favorable conditions for the development of small and medium sized businesses which involve a significant part of the state s citizens In the future the success of administrative reform will be determined by the extent to which local governments can effectively use the community s resource potential through a favorable local business environment attract investment in regional development create new jobs and develop infrastructure Therefore the decisions made by local governments today must be adaptive and timely and must be based on the basic provisions of the strategy of community development and the region as a whole be comprehensive and systematic. However, subjectivity and incompetence in decision making by representatives of different levels of government are an active demotivator for entrepreneurship as it inhibits its development and the development of communities respectively. Such domestic scientists as Andriychuk V, Zabolotny G, Zakharchenko V, Kaletnik G, Kubay O, Mazur A, Mesel Veselyak V, Shinkovych A, Sabluk P and others determined the prerequisites for creating highly effective territorial communities. Theoretical developments and practical recommendations of these scientists were reflected in scientific works and directly in the implementation of administrative reform in our country. Scientists have created basic approaches to creating highly effective communities and their further development. However, the novelty of the issue, the lack of practical experience of local government leadership in the effective management of newly created communities and the new challenges of today require further research on this issue. In order to increase the effectiveness of decisions at the level of territorial communities, further development and scientific substantiation of scientific and practical principles of development of territorial communities in the context of decentralization of power are required. According to the authors, under these conditions, special attention should be paid to the key factors that influence effective management decisions: features of building a rational organizational structure of local government, prerequisites for rational use of community resource potential, energy and food security issues, etc. This determines the relevance of this research. The results of the presented research in the monograph are made within the initiative of the Department of Administrative Management and Alternative Energy Sources of Vinnytsia National Agrarian University. Ensuring the development of territorial communities in terms of local government reform. State registration number 0122U002096 for 2022-2024. Because they are ectotherms, these reptiles are totally dependent upon external sources to maintain body temperature and therefore metabolic function. Their physical environment is vital for them to remain healthy, and as owners, we have to provide sufficient choice in the environment for them to be able to experience as near optimum conditions as we can Written by a leading clinical animal behaviourist this book is an important read for anyone involved in tortoise welfare from students and zoo rescue staff to pet owners and the veterinarians advising them the food you bought was the food you thought you bought Could something manufactured still be pure Is it okay to manipulate nature far enough to produce new foods but not so far that you question its safety and health How do you know where the line is And who decides In Pure Adulteration Benjamin R Cohen uses the pure food crusades to provide a captivating window onto the origins of manufactured foods and the perceived problems they wrought Cohen follows farmers manufacturers grocers hucksters housewives politicians and scientific analysts as they struggled to demarcate and patrol the ever contingent always contested border between purity and adulteration and as at the end of the nineteenth century the very notion of a pure food changed In the end there is and was no natural prehuman distinction between pure and adulterated to uncover and enforce we have to decide Today's world is different from that of our nineteenth century forebears in many ways but the challenge of policing the difference between acceptable and unacceptable practices remains central to daily decisions about the foods we eat how we produce them and what choices we make when buying them
