The Claims of Parenting Stefan Ramaekers, Judith Suissa, 2011-09-15 Many sociological historical and cultural stories can be and have already been told about why it is that parents in post industrial western societies face an often overwhelming array of advice on how to bring up their children At the same time there have been several philosophical treatments of the legal moral and political issues surrounding issues of procreation the rights of children and the duties of parents as well as some philosophical accounts of the shifts in our underlying conceptualization of childhood and adult child relationships While this book partly builds on the insights of this literature it is significantly different in that it offers a philosophically informed discussion of the actual practical experience of being a parent with its deliberations judgements and dilemmas In probing the ethical and conceptual questions suggested by the parent child relationship this unique volume demonstrates the irreducible philosophical richness of this relationship and thus provides an important counter balance to the overly empirical and largely psychological focus of a great deal of parenting literature Unlike other analytic work on the parent child relationship and the educational role of parents this work draws on first person accounts of the day to day experience of being a parent in order to explore the ethical and epistemological aspects of this experience In so doing it exposes the limitations of some of the languages within which contemporary parenting is conceptualized and discussed and opens up a space for thinking about childrearing and the parent child relationship beyond and other than in terms of the languages which dominate the ways in which we generally think about it today

The Science of Leadership Julian Barling, 2014 Barling takes an evidenced based approach to his subject relying primarily on knowledge generated from psychological research on organisational leadership conducted around the world with some personal reflections from two decades of involvement in leadership research and leadership development with executives

Standing Up to Supernanny Jennie Bristow, 2013-09-09 Parenthood we are told requires a massive adjustment to our lives emotions and relationships and we have to be taught how to deal with that But can it really be so bad that we need constant counselling and parenting classes It is a myth that today's parents are hopeless and lazy in many ways we have become too diligent too hopeful of great outcomes and clear rewards to the point where we lose ourselves in trying to provide some kind of professional service to our children The current obsession with perfect parenting increases our insecurity and distrust of each other and diminishes our authority over our kids This book is about asking Why have we invited Supernanny into our living rooms and how can we kick her out      Talking about the Science of Parenting FrameWorks Institute,2018 This paper aims to help better communicate the evidence around effective parenting Though researchers are learning more and more about effective caregiving practices people are resistant to research based messages because they see parenting as an individual rather than a societal issue and not as a skill that can be learned or is associated with science messages can also be perceived as attacks on people's identity This paper argues that communicators should move from framing messages as about improving parenting to one of supporting child development The paper draws on research conducted by the FrameWorks Institute in partnership with the Parenting Research Centre To begin interviews were held with with 10 researchers practitioners and policy experts a review of the literature was conducted and interviews were held with with 90 members of the public on cultural understandings and beliefs about parenting A set of frames were then developed and tested in a survey of over 7 000 members of the public      The Science of Well-Being: Integration into Clinical Child Psychiatry, An Issue of Child and Adolescent Psychiatric Clinics of North America Matthew Biel,Jeff Bostic,David C. studies that can help parents or future parents make sensible informed decisions This short book captures a series of micro lectures by Dr David Barner Professor of Psychology at UC San Diego sampled from the online EdX class The Science of Parenting The goal of these micro lectures is to survey and skeptically analyze important scientific debates spanning a range of topics that are central to the lives of parents dietsleepdisciplinelearningscreen timeimpulse controlvaccinationDr Barner also explores ongoing mysteries like what causes autism and why so many children are allergic to peanuts Most important the book not only digs into existing science but also explores the underlying nature of parenting science itself Often scientists measure correlations they ask how different parenting practices are related to different behaviors in children But the claims they make from correlational data are often much much stronger For example from correlational data scientists often claim that parents cause the behaviors of their kids This books shows how this type of error common in the scientific literature can explain a significant amount of the confusion present in the media and general public It discusses how to avoid the same error when evaluating science and how to use the sum of available evidence to inform decision making Dr Barner a leading authority on language mathematics education and cognitive development is Professor of Psychology at the University of California San Diego

After providing a historical sketch of definitional issues in the science of religion, the first section reviews basic descriptive information on children's religious development as well as wholistic theoretical models and measures of children's religious development. The second section covers evidence about links of child and parental religion to children's psychosocial adjustment and highlights the need for more research that discriminates specific positive and negative manifestations of religion for children's development. The third section summarizes evidence about the robust influence of parents on their children's religious development and parents' perceptions of their role in this process. The fourth section focuses on cognitive developmental research on children's cognitions about God, deities, and prayer. The Element concludes with a synopsis of key themes and challenges that researchers face to advance the science of children's religious development.
