Hatch, 2021-12-15 With the dramatic changes OPEC precipitated in the structure of world energy markets during the 1970s energy became a central concern to policymakers throughout the industrialized West This book examines the responses of public officials in three leading European nations the Federal Republic of Germany France and the Netherlands to the energy crisis As the study shows the proposed energy programs in the three countries shared remarkable similarities yet the policy outcomes were very different To explain why Michael T Hatch goes beyond the specific content of government energy policy to include an analysis of the policymaking process itself At the heart of the study is an exploration of the various dimensions of nuclear policy in West Germany The political consensus on nuclear power that prevailed in the initial years following the energy crisis disintegrated as antinuclear citizens initiatives the courts and trade unions as well as the traditional political parties entered the policymaking process Subsequent government efforts to resolve the political stalemate over nuclear power foundered in a morass of domestic electoral politics and an international debate over nuclear proliferation Extending the analysis to comparisons with French and Dutch nuclear strategies Hatch argues that the critical factor in determining nuclear policy was the manner in which the political system structured the nuclear debate In contrast to West Germany where the electoral and parliamentary systems enhanced the influence of the antinuclear Greens the electoral system and constellation of political parties in France served to dissipate the influence of the antinuclear forces Thus in France the nuclear program encountered few impediments In the Netherlands as in West Germany government policy was paralyzed in the face of antinuclear sentiment across a broad spectrum of Dutch society Hatch has provided here not only a useful examination of the development of energy policy in western Europe but also a case study of the close interplay between policy and politics Science for Tenth Class Part 2

Services of General Interest Beyond the Single Market Markus Krajewski, 2015-06-23 This is the first book ever to assess comprehensively the impact of EU international agreements on services of general interest Services of general interest remain high on the political and legal agenda of the European Union However the debates about the impact of EU law on services of general interest usually focus on internal market law such as the free movement of services competition law state aid rules and the law of public procurement The external and international dimensions of the European legal framework for services of general interest are often overlooked This book addresses the impact of international trade and investment agreements on public services and the role these services play in EU external relations It shows that the inherent tension between establishing and securing undistorted competition on markets and the logic of public services exists in international economic law in a similar way as in EU internal law Given the contentiousness of international trade and investment agreements as well as the EU's external policies the issues discussed in this volume are timely and relevant and contribute to the ongoing debate about the future of services of general interest in the EU with fresh ideas and perspectives Markus Krajewski is Professor of Public and International Law at the University of Erlangen Nuremberg Germany
