Bowers,2011 This book is especially timely for reasons related to the current efforts on the part of several national organizations to promote sustainability reforms in courses in all academic disciplines The American Association for Sustainability in Higher education is in the forefront of this reform effort Replacing an inefficient campus infrastructures was easy when compared to the challenges of engaging faculty in discussions of how the content of their courses continue to reinforce the deep cultural assumptions that gave conceptual direction to the individualistic consumer dependent lifestyle that that is now widely recognized as unsustainable The chapters address a number of especially daunting challenges with the main one being that many faculty who were graduate students in the last decades of the 20th Century continue to think within the same conceptual frameworks they acquired from their mentors Their mentors were unaware of environmental limits as well as the metaphorical nature of language that reproduces the ecologically problematic cultural assumptions that in turn have become part of today s students taken for granted world Several chapters address such limitations of these 20th Century conceptual frameworks as the way academic freedom is now being use by many faculty in the social sciences humanities and professional schools to justify ignoring not only the ecological crisis and the failure to ask whether such traditional areas of inquiry such as the thinking of Western philosophers and other abstract theorists will be useful to students as they face the life changing environmental impacts of climate change Two other key issues that must be taken into account if sustainability reforms are to be introduced in courses across the academic disciplines include the need for faculty to understand the many ways in which the emphasis on print based theory fosters abstract thinking thus further strengthening the long held myth of individual intelligence The need to understand cultures as ecologies and the difference between individual and ecological intelligence are also discussed The book also contains a discussion of the university administrators essential role in holding faculty accountable for engaging in extended discussions of the language issues such as the linguistic colonization of the present by the past the recursive cultural patterns that are being represented as the latest progressive ways of thinking that are the basis of many of today s conceptual double binds and how to foster the students awareness of the different ways that ideologies technologies and silences are undermining what remains of the cultural and environmental commons The critique of current misconceptions that underlie different disciplines as well as the resistance of many faculty to taking the ecological crisis seriously are balanced with extended discussions of alternative ways of thinking about language the connections between print storage which is amplified by computer mediated learning and communication and the ways in which oral traditions foster awareness of contexts and patterns of moral reciprocity and thus ecological intelligence In effect the book provides the conceptual framework that needs to be the focus of faculty discussions if these discussion are going to help faculty avoid the misconception that adding a couple of readings by environmental writers or learning about ecologically sustainable community practices will enable students to make the transition to a post industrial way of thinking
