Milne, 2012-02-27 In this original study Milne moves between close readings of letters postcards and emails and investigations of the material technological infrastructures of these forms to answer the question How does presence function as an aesthetic and rhetorical strategy within networked communication practices As her work reveals the relation between old and new communication systems is more complex than allowed in much contemporary media theory Although the correspondents of letters postcards and emails are not usually present to one another as they write and read their exchanges this does not necessarily inhibit affective communication Indeed this study demonstrates how physical absence may in some instances provide correspondents with intense intimacy and a spiritual almost telepathic sense of the other's presence While corresponding by letter postcard or email readers construe an imaginary incorporeal body for their correspondents that in turn reworks their interlocutor's self presentation In this regard the fantasy of presence reveals a key paradox of cultural communication namely that material signifiers can be used to produce the experience of incorporeal presence

Kindergarten Panic Bailey A. Brown, 2025-08-19 How school choice reproduces inequality by creating gendered and socioeconomic decision making labor for parents School choice policies have proliferated in recent years with parents forced to navigate complex admission processes In New York City families have more options than ever before but the search for the right school has proven to be time consuming painstaking and anxiety provoking work In Kindergarten Panic Bailey Brown examines the experiences of parents as they search for elementary schools finding that socioeconomic inequalities and persistent disparities in resources information access and decision making power contribute to broad variation in how families develop and manage their school choice labor strategies The labor that parents invest in searching for schools is unevenly distributed and shaped by gender socioeconomic background and neighborhood contexts Drawing on interviews with more than a hundred parents of elementary school students in New York City Brown shows how inequality manifests itself as parents and students deal with the uncertainties of the school choice process By conceptualizing school decision making as labor she makes visible the often unseen work that goes into making educational decisions for children Brown argues that recognizing school choice as labor both deepens our theoretical understanding of the challenges families confront and identifies vast disparities in parents labor across socioeconomic and gender divisions If parents continue to be charged with searching for schools we must take seriously how school choice policies reproduce the kind of inequality they are intended to reduce and we must invest in providing equitable access to high quality public schooling for all families
