SUBJECT: Criminal Law: Batterer Intervention Program Progress Report in Domestic Violence Cases (approve form CR-168) (Action Required)

Issue Statement

Defendants in domestic violence cases must, as a condition of probation, successfully complete a 52-week batterer's intervention program. Courts may not be consistently receiving necessary information to evaluate the progress of the defendants in these programs.

Recommendation

The Criminal Law Advisory Committee recommends that the Judicial Council, effective January 1, 2007, approve form CR-168, Batterer Intervention Program Progress Report, that will assist courts in monitoring defendants' progress in batterer intervention programs.

The proposed form is attached at page 3.

Rationale for Recommendation

The proposed new optional form is for batterer intervention program (BIP) providers to inform the court of progress in the defendant's treatment in domestic violence cases. The purpose of the form is to assist the court in evaluating the defendants' progress in the statutorily mandated program. The proposed form, CR-168, Batterer Intervention Program Progress Report, was considered in light of a recent report to Attorney General Bill Lockyer by the Task Force on Local Criminal Justice Response to Domestic Violence. That report noted that concern has been expressed that defendants often do not successfully complete BIP counseling and suggested that the courts and probation departments do more supervision of defendants' progress in these programs. During the past ten years the problem of child abuse has been the subject of increased attention both in the professional community and among the general public. The reasons for this widespread recognition are clear. First, professionals of many disciplines deal with child abusive families and do so in a variety of ways. Physicians, hospital staff, and teachers are often the first to assess a child as the victim of abuse; social workers and child protective personnel investigate cases of suspected abuse; court and legal authorities make determinations concerning the needs of an abused child; and mental health professionals, including psychologists, social workers, and family counselors, often have responsibility for treating abusive families. Few clinical problems have received this kind of widespread interdisciplinary recognition, and given the nature and seriousness of child abusive behavior, few problems receive such intensive attention within each profession's literature.

A second factor responsible for increased study of child abuse is the fact that violence directed toward children is probably the most extreme form of family dysfunction seen by counselors, therapists, and other practitioners. While other types of child management and anger control problems occur far more frequently, the consequences of child abusive behavior are much more serious than the consequences of other problems seen in child or family clinics. It has been estimated that as many as 550,000 children are the targets of parental abuse in the country each year (Helfer, Kemper, 1976).

Forensic Mental Health Assessment Kirk Heilbrun, David DeMatteo, Stephanie Brooks Holliday, Casey LaDuke, 2014

Forensic mental health assessment (FMHA) continues to develop and expand as a specialization. Since the publication of the First Edition of Forensic Mental Health Assessment: A Casebook over a decade ago, there have been a number of significant changes in the applicable law, ethics, science, and practice that have shaped the conceptual and empirical underpinnings of FMHA. The Second Edition of Forensic Mental Health Assessment is thoroughly updated in light of the developments and changes in the field while still keeping the unique structure of presenting cases, detailed reports, and specific teaching points on a wide range of topics. Unlike anything else in the literature, it provides genuine (although disguised) case material so that trainees as well as legal and mental health professionals can review how high-quality forensic evaluation reports are written. It features contributions from leading experts in forensic psychology and psychiatry, providing samples of work in their particular areas of specialization and discussing case material in the larger context of broad foundational principles and specific teaching points, making it a valuable resource for teaching, training, and continuing education. Now featuring 50 real-world cases, this new edition covers topics including criminal responsibility, sexual offending, risk evaluation, federal sentencing, capital sentencing, capacity to consent to treatment, personal injury, harassment, and discrimination, guardianship, juvenile commitment, transfer, and decertification, response style, expert testimony, evaluations in a military context, and many more. It will be invaluable for anyone involved in assessments for the courts, including psychologists, psychiatrists, social workers, and attorneys, as well as
