

When a rod is held with nylon, a PVC rod gives electrons a static charge. The rod has been charged by static. Even though the rod is being brought near, the rod keeps its charge. What is responsible for the charges?

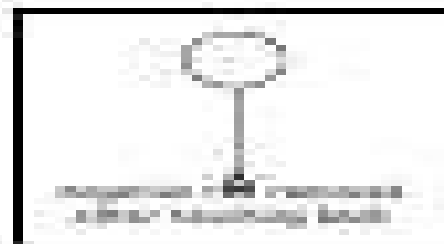

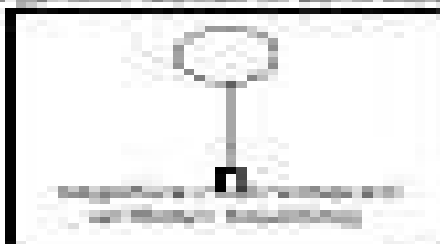

- When the rod is near the metal sphere, the metal sphere is charged. The rod charges because electrons move around within and spread out as far as possible. In the first diagram, draw an arrow showing the direction the electrons move. When the rod is removed, the sphere is left with a static charge. The process is charging, induction and static charge. What is the reason? Diagram draw the rod's charge on the sphere.

- The following series shows a static ball and charged rod. In each case, draw the arrangement that charge distribution on the ball.

- Charging a static charge without touching is called induction. The side of the object closest to the charged distribution is charged that is (like same as, opposite than) the charged rod. The process is charging, induction.

- Draw the lines on the electrostatic lines, and use a positive and a negative charge to show the charge distribution in each case.
