Micromobility and the Next Infrastructure Wave Rahul Razdan,2024-10-04 US transportation infrastructure is dominated by the automobile form factor Alternative modalities of movement such as bikes golf carts and other micromobility options have existed but are decidedly at a lower tier of importance Even pedestrian access ways are not overly emphasized in the US transportation system This lack of prioritization matches the reality that the vast majority of people and commerce moves through the motor vehicle infrastructure with micromobility sitting in the periphery Additionally given the current lack of commercial applications there are limited direct fee based funding mechanisms connected to micromobility form factors Micromobility and the Next Infrastructure Wave discusses how recent technological innovations in electrification e commerce and autonomy are enabling a new class of micromobility devices which offer palpable value to consumers and enable significant commercial applications Unlike the past these micromobility devices now have the scale commercial funding and operational economic value to justify a focused infrastructure effort Click here to access the full SAE EDGETM Research Report portfolio <https://doi.org/10.4271/EPR2024022>

period from early May through late October 1942 that the fate of Japan's small elite naval air arm was sealed. It was at Coral Sea in May that Japan's juggernaut across the Pacific was blunted. It was at Midway in June that Japan's great carrier fleet was cut down to manageable size. And it was at Eastern Solomons in August and Santa Cruz in October that Japan's last best carrier air groups were ground to dust. After their technical victory at Santa Cruz the Japanese withdrew their carriers from the South Pacific and were never able to use them again as a strategically decisive weapon. Of the four Japanese aircraft carriers that participated in the Santa Cruz battle only one survived the war. Following Santa Cruz and the subsequent series of air and surface engagements known as the Naval Battle of Guadalcanal the Imperial Navy's Combined Fleet never again attempted a meaningful strategic showdown with the U.S. Pacific Fleet. Though several subsequent surface actions in the Solomons were clearly Japanese victories their results were short lived. After November 1942 Japan could not again muster the staying power or the willpower to wage a strategic war with her navy. Once the veteran carrier air groups had been shredded at Eastern Solomons and Santa Cruz Japanese carriers ceased to be a strategic weapon. The Santa Cruz clash was deemed a Japanese victory because U.S. naval forces withdrew from the battlefield. That is how victory and defeat are strictly determined. But on the broader strategic level the U.S. Navy won at Santa Cruz because it was able to achieve its strategic goal of holding the line and buying time. Japan was unable to achieve her strategic goal of defeating the U.S. Pacific Fleet in a final decisive all or nothing battle. The technical victory cost Japan any serious hope she had of winning the Pacific naval war. The victory at Santa Cruz cost Japan her last best hope to win the war in the Pacific. Once again author/historian Eric Hammel brings to the reading public an exciting narrative filled with the latest information and written in the edge of the seat style that his readers have enjoyed for nearly two decades in nearly thirty acclaimed military history books. As was the case with its companion volume Carrier Clash this new book is based upon American and Japanese battle reports and the recollections of many airmen and seamen who took part.
