are emblematic of what Bollmer and Guinness call the Corpopocene a moment in capitalism in which individuals achieve the status of living breathing talking corporations Behind the veneer of leisure and indulgence most influencers are laboring daily usually for pittance wages to manufacture a commodity called the self a raw material for brands to use with the dream of becoming corporations in human form by owning and investing in the products they sell Refuting the theory that digital labor and economies are immaterial Bollmer and Guinness search influencer content for evidence of the material infrastructure of capitalism Each chapter looks to what literally appears in the backgrounds of videos and images the houses cars warehouses and spaces of the market that point back to the manufacturing and circulation of consumer goods Demonstrating the material reality of producing the self as a commodity The Influencer Factory makes a crucial contribution to our understanding of contemporary economic life
