Emergency Thyroidectomy: A Rare Case

¹Nitin Gupta, ²Saurabh Varshney

ABSTRACT

Primary thyroid lymphoma is a rare tumor of the thyroid gland, accounting for 1 to 2% of all thyroid malignancies. The mainstay of treatment for lymphomas is chemoradiation but thyroidectomy is required for patients with large thyroid gland presenting with obstructive symptoms, such as stridor. We present here such a case of a 54-year-old female who had presented in the emergency department of our institute with a huge neck swelling and stridor. Emergency thyroidectomy was done to relieve stridor.

Keywords: Emergency thyroidectomy, Lymphoma, Malignant.

INTRODUCTION

Thyroid lymphoma is a form of cancer that develops from lymphocytes. Normal lymphocytes are often present in the thyroid gland as part of a process of autoimmune inflammation that can lead to gradual destruction of tissue.¹ These white blood cells may start to grow abnormally, expanding to form a mass called a lymphoma. Only about 2% of extranodal lymphomas arise within the thyroid gland, and lymphomas represent no more than 2% of all malignant thyroid tumors.² Thyroid lymphomas can grow rapidly, and may expand to the point, where it compresses other structures in the neck, causing problems with speech, swallowing, or breathing. Primary lymphoma of the thyroid, although rare, should always be considered in the differential diagnosis of patients with thyroid nodules, goiter, and carcinomas, mainly because its prognosis and treatment differ substantially from that of the other disorders.³ Thyroid lymphoma usually responds well to treatment with external beam radiation therapy and chemotherapy. Surgical intervention is rarely required in the treatment of thyroid lymphomas. Some patients presenting with symptoms of compromised airway, dysphagia or severe pain, may require surgery to palliate their symptoms.

CASE HISTORY

A 54-year-old female presented in the emergency department with noisy breathing for the last 2 days. There was history of midline neck swelling for the last 8 years. This swelling was stationary in size initially but there was rapid progression in the size of the swelling for the last 2 months. There was history of difficulty in breathing for the last 15 days with presence of noisy breathing for the last 2 days. Hoarseness of voice was also present for the last 2 months. There was no history of dysphagia, choking or weight loss. On examination, biphasic stridor was present. A midline neck swelling of 7 × 5 cm in size was present which was nontender, temperature over the swelling was normal, margins were ill-defined (Fig. 1). Swelling was diffuse and firm in consistency. It was mobile with deglutition. There was bilateral (B/L) cervical lymphadenopathy. Indirect laryngoscopy was suggestive of left vocal cord palsy.

The patient was hospitalized and put on IV fluids. Injection hydrocortisone 200 mg IV stat was administered to the patient to relieve the stridor. A contrast enhanced CT scan of the neck was performed (Figs 2A to C). A large thyroid gland mass measuring 12 × 10 cm, encasing and narrowing the tracheal lumen with mediastinal extension with B/L neck lymphadenopathy and consolidation of left upper lobe of lung. The patient was shifted to the operation theater for emergency thyroidectomy. A standard collar incision was made. The operative findings were suggestive

Geriatric Medicine Michael R. Wasserman, Debra Bakerjian, Sunny Linnebur, Sharon Brangman, Matteo Cesari, Sonja Rosen, 2024-02-19 Both volumes sold as a combined set for a one time purchase Older adults represent the most rapidly growing demographic in the U S and in many developed countries around the world The field of geriatric medicine is still relatively young and is only recently seeing a significant increase in peer reviewed literature Medicare and Medicaid expenditures related to older adults are nearly a trillion dollars year in the US How our healthcare system cares for older adults and how those older adults navigate an increasingly complex system is of the utmost importance According to the Institute of Medicine physicians and other healthcare professionals receive an inadequate amount of training in geriatric medicine Geriatric medicine is based on the concept of delivering person centered care with a focus on function and quality of life It is essential that physicians nurse practitioners physician assistants pharmacists social workers and other health care professionals all be knowledgeable about the geriatric approach to care Geriatric medicine varies from most other fields in medicine While many specialties function on the basis of evidence based literature geriatricians and other clinicians caring for older adults must integrate relatively limited evidence with variable physiological changes and complex psychosocial determinants Geriatricians are used to caring for 90 year olds with multiple chronic illnesses Their variable physiology leads to uncertain responses to pharmacotherapy and their personal goals and wishes need to be incorporated into any plan of care Practicing geriatric medicine requires the ability to see patterns But it goes one step further as the rules are constantly in flux Every patient is an individual with particular needs and goals In order to provide true person centered care to older adults one has to incorporate these factors into the decision making process The proposed handbook is designed to present a comprehensive and state of the art update that incorporates existing literature with clinical experience Basic science and the physiology of aging create a background but are not the main focus This is because every chapter has been written through the lens of person centered care This book is about focusing on what matters to the person and how that is not always about pathology and physiology The reader generally will not find simple solutions to symptoms diseases and syndromes In fact the key to caring for geriatric patients is the ability to think both critically and divergently at the same time Geriatrics encompasses multiple disciplines and spans all of the subspecialties It requires knowledge of working within an interdisciplinary team It requires an appreciation of how quality of life varies with each individual and creates treatment and care plans that also vary And most of all it requires a firm commitment to first learning who the person is so that all of the necessary data can be analyzed and integrated into a true person centered plan of care This book aims to serve as an unparalleled resource for meeting these challenges Updated and revised from the previous edition this text features over 40 new peer reviewed chapters new references and a wide array of useful new tools that are updated on a regular basis by interdisciplinary and interprofessional experts in geriatric medicine
