Nineteenth-Century American Literature Amy Dunham Strand,2024-09-30 Political Prayer in Nineteenth Century American Literature explores how American women writers such as Catharine Maria Sedgwick Harriet Beecher Stowe Rebecca Harding Davis and Emily Dickinson translated petitioning a political form for redress of grievances with religious resonance or what Strand calls political prayer in their literary works At a time when petitioning was historically transforming governments mobilizing masses and democratizing North America these White women writers wrote literary petitions to advocate for others in social justice causes such as antiremoval antislavery and labor reform to transform American literature and culture and to articulate an ambivalent political agency Political Prayer in Nineteenth Century American Literature introduces historic petitioning into literary study as an overlooked but important new lens for reading nineteenth century fiction and poetry Understanding petitions in these literary works and these literary works as petitions also helps us to understand women s political agency before their enfranchisement to explain why scholars have long debated and inconsistently interpreted the works of well anthologized women writers and to see more clearly the multidimensional coexisting and often competing religious and political aspects of their writings Weekly Notes Frederick Pollock,1880 McPherson's Law of Company Liquidation Andrew R. Federal Energy Regulatory Commission,2006-04 Marginalized Religion and the Law in the Roman Empire K. P. S. Janssen,2024-11-20 The Roman Empire s approach to religion has traditionally been described in paradoxical terms On the one hand Rome has often been regarded as almost proverbially tolerant as well as highly flexible in its dealings with the diverse range of religious cults and practices within its territories On the other hand the Roman religious landscape was not without its limits and there were certain groups who found themselves for one reason or another on the outside The legal interactions between these groups and the Roman authorities have largely been studied in isolation In Marginalized Religion and the Law in the Roman Empire K P S Janssen instead takes a comparative approach and investigates how members of various marginalized religious groups were embedded in and interacted with the wider Roman legal system The legal positions of private diviners Jewish communities and early Christians are compared and contrasted to provide a broader perspective on the legal treatment of marginalized religion in the Roman world Janssen argues that the known interactions between these respective groups and the Roman authorities are best understood within the wider context of Roman law and administration and that they furthermore shared a number of important characteristics While the treatment these groups received was certainly not in all respects identical the procedural socio political and ideological mechanisms that underpinned the relevant legal measures were nonetheless conspicuously similar USPTO Image File Wrapper Petition Decisions 0299 , USPTO Image File Wrapper Petition Decisions 0292 ,
