Haskell,2009 Do journalists report more favourably on people that they like than on those they don t Canada s evangelicals think so For years they ve accused the country s news personnel of being prejudiced against them both personally and in their coverage However up to now the evangelicals charge of media bias has never been empirically examined This book puts that charge to the test An in depth survey of national news personnel accompanied by an extensive multi year examination of news coverage reveals how Canada s journalists feel about evangelicals how they report on evangelicals and how and when their feelings influence their reporting In the end this book concludes when the beliefs and actions of Canadian evangelicals directly clash with the heart felt convictions of Canadian national journalists the journalists are willing to abandon their professional objectivity and slant their stories against their ideological opponents In addition this book uses the media s treatment of evangelicals as a backdrop for the discussion of larger issues How the media construct the news how and why the media cover religion as they do whether journalistic objectivity exists at all and the affect media messages have on audiences is explored Also advice on how religious groups can overcome media bias is offered As the first book to apply the tools of quantitative research to the topic of religion and the news in Canada this book is groundbreaking However written with the lay reader in mind the theoretical underpinnings of the work and methodologies used are presented in accessible easy to understand terms This book will be of interest to all member of the evangelical community clergy and faith leaders and scholars of religion or mass communication This is response rather than reaction Intelligent balanced incisive and instructive At last such a book about such a subject from someone who understands evangelical Christianity as well as media Essential reading for everyone interested in both Michael Coren Author columnist and broadcaster David M Haskell Ph D is associate professor of journalism and contemporary studies at the Brantford campus of Wilfrid Laurier University

Campbell, Kim M. LeDuff, Cheryl D. Jenkins, Rockell A. Brown, 2013-07-03 The history of American journalism is marked by disturbing representations of people and communities of color from the disgraceful stereotypes of pre civil rights America to the more subtle myths that are reflected in routine coverage by journalists all over the country Race and News Critical Perspectives aims to examine these journalistic representations of race and in doing so to question whether or not we are living in a post racial world By looking at national coverage of stories like the Don Imus controversy Hurricane Katrina Barack Obama s presidential candidacy and even the Virginia Tech shootings readers are given an opportunity to gain insight into both subtle and overt forms of racism in the newsroom and in national dialogue The book itself is divided into two sections with the first examining the journalistic routine and the decisions that go into covering a story with or without relation to race The second section comprised of case studies explores the coverage of national stories and how they have impacted the dialogue on race and racism in the United States As a whole the collection of essays and studies also reflects a variety of research approaches With a goal of contributing to the discussion about race and its place in American journalism this broad examination makes Race and News an ideal text for courses on cultural diversity and the media as well as making it valuable to professional journalists and journalism students who seek to improve their approach to coverage of diverse communities
